Quit Now, Taft Urges Congress, Under Attack

Would Ask Nation For Confidence Vote As President Continues Criticism

Philadelphia, June 11 (AP).—Ohio's Senator Robert A. Taft called today for immediate adjournment of Congress.

The GOP presidential candidate said there is "little use" in keeping Congress in session while President Truman is delivering "an attack on the principles of representative government itself."

In a major address 12 days before the Republican national convention opens here, Taft urged party members to "appeal to the people in November for a vote of confidence in the election of a President who will cooperate in our program."

He told a gathering at the Union League:

"Our gallivanting President is blackguarding Congress at every whistle stop in the West for the simple reason that Congress happens to differ with him in his whole philosophy of government."

At Expense of Voters

"The President is traveling through the country with a 15-car train at the expense of the voters," Taft said, adding that Mr. Truman's "attitude toward the people's representatives" means that there is little use in Congress remaining in session and "working day and night to complete constructive programs."

Mr. Truman would "destroy our free economy" and bring about "vastly increased spending by the Federal Government," Taft said.

"No matter how wild the proposal, he will indorse it."

He told the gathering Mr. Truman would "return to the same soft policy toward communism which was followed by his predecessor, the policy which placed Russia in the powerful position it occupies today."

Taft added:

The President "does not understand the difference between American principles of free government and communism . . .

"He doesn't seem to realize that communism is an organized, worldwide conspiracy directed from Russia and using every means, legal and illegal, to extend its influence and power in the United States."

Offers "Winning" Program

Taft said that "our only hope of winning the great ideological war" with the Soviet Union lies in the election of an administration:

1. "Which abhors regulation and spending and Federal power;"
2. "Which believes in liberty, equality and justice;"
3. "Which believes in the success of the American system;"
4. "Which is prepared to spread American philosophy throughout the world, to meet the Communist crusade with American faith."

Taft said that "if the President had his way, there would be an immediate increase in taxes in every category. Since the wealthy already pay a greater part of their income in taxes, most of the burden would fall on the middle and lower incomes."

President Truman, said Taft, would repeal the Taft-Hartley law "and restore the days when every small employer was at the mercy of a labor union officer." The President's program "would create a nation completely regimented, choked by taxation, under the domination of centralized bureaucracy and arbitrary union leadership."

Speaking at the Philadelphia Junior Chamber of Commerce tonight, Taft criticized the foreign policy of this country.

"We have appeased Russia at

Hazy Overhead? It's Smoke From Canada Forest Fire

If the sky appeared slightly overcast over Washington yesterday while the sun gave off a sort of rosy glow, there was a reason for it.

It seems that smoke clouds from a Canadian forest fire, held together by some atmospheric vagary, drifted south across the border as far as Washington.

By the time the errant smoke reached here it had almost dissipated, the District forecaster said, giving the sky a hazy appearance at high altitudes. The rosy glow was caused by diffusion of the sun's rays among the cinder particles, he said.

D. C. Budget Total Fixed at $99,729,483

The $99,729,483 District budget total for the fiscal year beginning July 1 was fixed yesterday by a joint congressional conference committee.

Final congressional action on the record city budget may come today, since both houses will be in session.

The compromise budget total is $161,500 more than the total of the bill approved earlier by the Senate. The House had recommended that the budget total $101,164,983. The Commissioners' requests totaled $101,897,283.

The conference committee was headed by Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho) and Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.).

House Group Approves $200 Teachers' Raise

A $200 one-year pay increase for Washington school teachers was approved by the House District Committee yesterday. The bill is slated for House action Monday.

Also approved was a bill to equalize salary treatment given teachers having a master's degree now in the school system with new teachers being hired.

ADA Granted D. C. Delegate Injunction

Democratic Central Committee Selection Method Draws Fire

The District Democratic Central Committee was caught between two fires yesterday for what critics called undemocratic selection of delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia July 12.

On one hand representatives of Americans for Democratic Action sought and obtained a court hearing after the District party committee refused to place names of four ADA candidates on the ballot for its primary next Monday.

At the same time, National Democratic Party Chairman J. Howard McGrath declared that he would seek to deny seats to the District committee delegates if the committee went through with its plan to force election of its slate of 12 hand-picked delegates.

McGrath said he would recommend to the credential committee of the convention that the District committee delegates be denied seats in favor of others more democratically chosen.

Attorney Melvin D. Hildreth, the District chairman, told The Washington Post that a charter granted by McGrath's committee 26 years ago gives the District committee the right to appoint the District delegates to the national convention by limiting the primary candidates to persons whom it approved.

Hildreth said that if the District committee was allowed to go through with its plans for a primary next Monday the only candidates for the 12 places as delegates would be 12 candidates approved by the committee, and that the ballot would have no spaces for other candidates to be written in.

The 12 candidates approved by the local organization to cast the District's six votes in the national convention are pro-Truman, and

Mine Sinks Danish Ship; 200 Missing

Parents Clutch Children, Leap Into Sea; Blast Jams Cabin Doors

Aalborg, Denmark, June 11 (AP).—Approximately 200 persons were believed drowned today when the Danish passenger vessel Kjoebenhavn struck a wartime mine and sank in the Kattegat.

Many of the victims were trapped when they were unable to force open the jammed doors of their cabins. Survivors said they heard them screaming.

Other dazed and injured passengers fought their way to the rail and jumped overboard or clung to the doomed steamer's superstructure and masts long enough to be rescued.

Many frantic parents clutched small children in their arms as they leaped from the stricken steamer. Mothers could be seen trying to hold their children out of the water.

Most Are Asleep at Time

Most of the passengers were asleep when the early-morning explosion ripped open the steamer.

A spokesman for the United Steamship Co., (DFDS) which owned the 1668-ton Kjoebenhavn, said the blast "almost lifted the ship out of the sea."

The company published a list of 261 passengers and crew members who survived. Many were seriously wounded and others were suffering from exposure. Some died before they could be brought ashore.

The only complete passenger list was aboard the Kjoebenhavn. Many of the passengers did not book passage until after they came aboard. This complicated the check of the missing.

Officially classified as missing were Frederik Graae, 73, high-ranking Danish government official, and 25 others connected with Copenhagen's technical high school.

Nearing End of Run

The mine, sown in Danish waters during the war, exploded as the Kjoebenhavn was nearing the end of her run from Copenhagen to Aalborg, 140 miles northwest of the Danish capital.

C. P. C. Kiil, master of the Kjoebenhavn, and 19 haggard crew members were flown from Aalborg to Copenhagen to the first official inquiry.

The company spokesman quoted Kiil as saying that the mine struck the Kjoebenhavn somewhat astern of midships, throwing her over on the starboard side. Lifeboats and life jackets were immediately distributed to the passengers and the crew made attempts to lower the lifeboats and set rafts afloat. When the sinking ship heeled over, all her rafts and many of the passengers and crew were thrown into the sea. Many persons clung to the rafts until help came.

Kiil said he managed to swim back to the ship and entered her while she was resting on the bottom. He found most of the ship's papers had been lost.

Planes Drop Lifebelts

Planes and surface craft, including about 1000 fishing cutters, converged on the scene, 4 miles south of the Aalborg Bay lightship. The planes dropped lifebelts to persons struggling in the sea.

First aid stations were set up along the coast. Ambulances and doctors from almost every town in northern Jutland were called.

It was not known what type of mine the vessel struck.

The ship went down in 10 minutes in a shallow shipping lane. The ship's superstructure still was above water. Those strong enough to reach the superstructure and masts and hang on were saved.

The Danish steamer Frigga picked up more than 200 survivors.

Truman Says Stalin Is Politburo Prisoner, Can't Keep Promises

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Eugene, Oreg., June 11.—President Truman declared here tonight that Marshal Josef Stalin of Russia is a "prisoner of the Politburo" and is unable to carry out agreements he has made with other countries.

He told a large trainside crowd that he had approached the Potsdam meeting with Stalin in 1945 with "complete friendliness for the Russians."

"I like old Joe Stalin," he said. He is a good fellow, but he is a prisoner of the Politburo.

"He would make certain agreements and he would keep those agreements, but they won't let him keep them."

A source of much of the strain in U. S.-Soviet relations has been Russian failure to carry out many agreements with this country.

[The United Press said that this was not the first time Mr. Truman has given such an evaluation of Stalin, but it was the first time for public consumption.

[The most recent occasion when he said Stalin was a prisoner unable to carry out his nation's agreement was under secret circumstances and reporters were enjoined to regard his remarks as off the record.—Editor's Note.]

President Truman stopped here on his way South from Portland, Oreg., to Berkeley, Calif., where on Saturday night he will deliver a major address on foreign relations. He urged the crowd here to listen to his speech but warned that "it will be a repeat—things that I've told you a hundred times before."

Mr. Truman eased up in his battle against Congress today.

For part of the day—45 minutes—he had been up in the air, flying in his plane, the Independence, over flooded areas of Washington and Oregon, where the rampaging Columbia River has made 50,000 persons homeless.

In Portland, whither he went after his flight, Mr. Truman again started raw-hiding the Republican-dominated Eightieth Congress. He charged it with wiping out an emergency fund which he might have been able to use to help flood sufferers in this region.

He told a crowd in Portland's Civic Auditorium that he was waiting for a joint resolution adopted by Congress to reach him so that he could sign it. This au-

Two on NLRB Differ on Taft Act Extension

Denham Sees Legal Duty to Cover Small Firms, Herzog Doesn't

By The Associated Press

The two big men of the National Labor Relations Board gave Congress exactly opposite views yesterday on whether the Taft-Hartley Act should be extended into small business like restaurants and stores.

General Counsel Robert N. Denham said the NLRB has a legal duty to give the protection of the new law to the employers and employes in all businesses "affecting" interstate commerce. (That means nearly all business.)

Chairman Paul M. Herzog said all five board members are agreed that they "are not nearly so anxious to move that far into new fields," and have discovered no legal obligation to do so. Herzog said the board is overloaded with cases already.

Show No Bitterness

They aired this major disagreement, with pleasant words and no bitterness, in testimony before the Joint Congregational Committee on Labor-Management Relations.

Senator Ball (R., Minn.), chairman of that committee, told reporters both Denham and Herzog made "very strong arguments," and he said, "I don't know which is right."

Here is the background of the important dispute:

The Wagner Act, which preceded the present law, gave the board wide authority to accept cases "affecting" interstate commerce. But the board chose not to exercise all the power it had. Legally it could have taken jurisdiction over most construction projects, most retail stores, and many other small businesses, but it left most of them to the States instead.

Contains Same Language

The Taft-Hartley Act contains the same language—"affecting" commerce.

But Denham, who has sole authority to decide what "unfair labor practice" cases to prosecute, says the new law created an entirely new situation. He has served notice he intends to penetrate into small business as well as large.

The five-man board, however, is the "court which sits in judgment" on the cases that Denham prosecutes.

And Herzog testified yesterday that the board can decide whether to accept certain cases or not. He said the board's rulings would presumably stand unless overthrown by Congress or the courts.

Denham, on the other hand, said the board has not power to turn down any case where the business clearly "affects" commerce.

That question may ultimately have to be decided by the courts.

Lewis Takes Round in Coal Benefit Fight

With Bridges, Puts Over Resolution to Tap Frozen Millions

By Harold W. Ward
Associated Press Reporter

John L. Lewis won a round yesterday in his fight to continue distress benefits to miners after July 1, but coal operator Ezra Van Horn promised a quick lawsuit to block the payments.

Lewis and Senator Bridges (R., N. H.), the neutral member of the three-man board of trustees, voted for a resolution to continue benefits according to the plan worked out by trustees of the old 1946 fund. That fund will be exhausted by July 1, when the current soft coal contract expires. The Lewis-Bridges agreement would have the payments made out of the 1947 welfare fund.

Lewis has insisted that the operators assume the obligations which were set up under the 1946 fund, as a condition to making a new contract without a strike next month.

To Unlock 40 Million

This would unlock the more than 40 million dollars accumulated under the July, 1947, contract between Lewis and the operators. This latter fund has been frozen because of the differences between Lewis and Van Horn over how to spend the money.

Van Horn thus far has blocked any payments under the 1947 contract, and his new lawsuit would bar the resolution agreed to yesterday by Lewis and Bridges.

Bridges was appointed the neutral trustee on April 10, and offered a compromise pension system which led to ending the pension strike.

Earlier yesterday, a coal operator sided with Lewis in his pension dispute with the mine owners, and the Mine Workers Journal accused the employers of trying to "liquidate" the union.

Dispute Continued

The end of the pension strike in April did not mean an end to the dispute. Van Horn asked the court for an injunction to keep Bridges and Lewis from making payments from the 1947 fund. He also served notice on the banks which hold the untouched sum that if they permitted withdrawal or transfer of any of the money it would be at their personal liability.

The 1946 fund, with a different set of trustees, was created by an agreement of May 29, 1946. A total of $25,000,000 was collected at the rate of five cents a ton, a rate to which Secretary of the Interior Krug agreed during Government operation of the mines.

The operators increased the tonnage collection to 10 cents in their one-year contract signed last July.

New Floods Engulf Edge Of Portland

Residential Area, Airport, Country Clubs Hit; 800 Fight to Save Plant

(From Press Dispatches)

Portland, Oreg., June 11

A new Columbia River flood disaster struck the Portland area tonight when floodwaters broke through a 200-foot levee gap and swept over a 12-mile strip of suburban residential districts, farmlands and country clubs fringing the city. The $6,500,000 Portland airport was inundated.

Surging waters rushed 6 feet deep across the Portland Army air base and cantonments, isolated hundreds of homes and forced scores to flee for their lives.

The river moved slowly toward a 43-million-dollar aluminum plant in Portland. Only one dike—being reinforced by 800 men—stood between the water and the Reynolds Metal Co. plant. Army Engineers could not predict whether it would hold.

Richland Threatened

Army engineers said the dikes protecting the rain-flooded town of Richland, Wash., were "critical," and prepared to evacuate the town if necessary.

The flood crisis that began three weeks ago and reached its peak with the Vanport City disaster, was sustaining itself with a continuing runoff of melting snows in the Rocky Mountains

The new dike break added thousands of acres to the vast area which has become a brown lake littered with the wreckage of houses.

Pressure from a Columbia River slough crumbled the dike shortly before 5 a. m. near a pumping station opposite the Riverside golf course. A pumping station attendant flashed the alarm.

Sirens Stop Work

Disaster sirens screamed. Troops from Fort Lewis and McChord Field, Wash., dropped equipment and sandbags and ran for safety. The water washed through in a wave, cascading into the lowlands of the Multnomah drainage district.

The first surge washed out roads and highways, swept away the 47th st. bridge, fanned out over the Riverside, Colwood and Broadmoor golf courses, and threatened the Alderwood golf course.

At some points the new flood reached a depth of 12 feet.

By early afternoon the main current of the flood had raced from 33d st. to 158 st.

Torrential rains washed out highways in central Oregon and Washington. Two persons drowned in an Oregon stream.

Wenatchee's 12,000 residents had only a single day's water supply after the Columbia River buckled the floor of that central Washington city's pumping plant.

A cloudburst flooded Yakima streets.

Fifty-five hundred residents of Sumas Prairie in British Columbia were ordered to flee as Fraser River dikes weakened.

The three-week toll of known dead stood at 35.

Hungary Starts Taking Over All Catholic Schools

Budapest, Hungary, June 11 (U.P.).—The Hungarian government today confiscated all equipment of non-state schools and moved swiftly to take over Catholic schools, which it ordered closed yesterday.

A law to nationalize church schools was approved by the cabinet today. Parliament is expected to pass it by June 18.

A Catholic priest who pleaded guilty to "incitement to murder" in organizing a demonstration against the nationalization plan was sentenced to death. A policeman was killed in the demonstration at Pocspetri. Clemency was recommended for the priest.

Senate Approves Plan for Arms Aid to Europe

Aid Slash Hit By Marshall And Hoffman

By The Associated Press

The "father" and the "boss" of the European Recovery Program said yesterday that the program faces ruin if spending cuts voted by the House are allowed to stand.

Secretary of State Marshall said the 16-nation recovery effort will be a "calculated risk for failure" unless the Senate succeeds in restoring most of the House cuts.

And Paul G. Hoffman, administrator of the program, said the cuts would practically wipe out "the most productive and the most far-reaching part"—putting European industry back on its feet.

Marshall, who first proposed the recovery plan a year ago this month, and Hoffman appeared before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Several Republican and Democratic members of the committee said the group will vote to put back most of the money which the House took out of the first-year budget for the "Marshall Plan," now known as the Economic Cooperation Administration (ECA).

Hoffman told the Senators this cut amounted to $1,433,000,000. He and Marshall were among the last to testify before the Senate group ended public hearings on the question.

(United Press said that "two of the most economy-minded Senators on the committe came out in opposition to the House slashes. Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) and Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.)

Resolution Drawn By Vandenberg Urges President to Seek Defense Pacts

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

An overwhelming Senate vote late yesterday approved the Vandenberg resolution, paving the way for American military help to a western European defense union.

The roll-call vote was 64 to 4, an indorsement almost as one-sided as the ratification of the United Nations Charter three years ago. The only Senators voting against the resolution were Arthur V. Watkins (R., Utah), William Langer (R., N. Dak.), Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) and Glen Taylor (D., Idaho).

A few minutes before the final vote, after eight hours of generally listless debate, the Senate rejected by 61 to 6 an amendment by Pepper to delete every reference to regional self-defense arrangements abroad.

An Important Decision

In its size and in its substance, the vote was one of the most important Senate decisions in the field of foreign policy since the end of the war. News of it was promptly cabled to American embassies abroad, and was expected to give new confidence to the non-Soviet nations of Europe.

The resolution did not commit the United States to join a military alliance or to give any military aid at this time; Vandenberg made this plain a dozen times during the debate. What it did, under the Senate's constitutional power of "advice," was to ask the President to negotiate an agreement and then submit it to the Senate for ratification.

Asks Voluntary Limit on Veto

The exact language of the resolution asked the Government to seek "association of the United States, by constitutional process, with such regional and other collective arrangements as are based on continuous and effective self-help and mutual aid, and as affect its national security."

The resolution also asked for other things—for a "voluntary agreement" limiting the use of the U. N. Security Council veto; for renewed efforts to provide the United Nations with armed forces and to limit armaments under safeguards; and, "if necessary," for a conference to review the charter "at an appropriate time."

Strengthens Government's Hand

But the heart of the resolution, and what made it truly historic, was the section that opened the door to making a defense agreement with the European union. This agreement might take the form of a treaty to supply military aid and to guarantee the western European group against aggression.

Secretary Marshall could have negotiated such a treaty anyway, subject to Senate approval, but as Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) said yesterday, the Senate resolution immensely strengthens the Administration's hands in starting such negotiations.

Similar Statement Before House

Its nearest counterparts were the Fulbright and Connally resolutions of 1943, under which President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull began the long negotiations that led to American membership in a United Nations organization.

The present resolution was formulated by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee after long study and debate, leading to a unanimous vote last month. A similar statement, embodied in a bill instead of in a resolution, has

House Votes Admission of 200,000 DPs

Bill, Also Covering Orphans, 2000 Czechs, Goes to Conference

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The House voted, 289 to 91, yesterday to open this Nation's doors to 200,000 Europeans from displaced persons camps, 2000 Czechs and thousands of orphan children.

The measure differs sharply from a Senate-passed act, which critics said discriminated against some national and racial groups.

The bill will now go to a joint Senate-House Conference Committee to iron out the differences in the two measures.

The House bill would admit in the next two years, 200,000 who have been living in DP camps in the occupied zones of Germany, Italy and Austria since April 21, 1947.

The Senate measure would admit only those who entered DP camps before December 22, 1947. Earl G. Harrison, chairman of the Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons, who termed the Senate measure "a booby-trap," said most of the Jews in the DP camps arrived a few months after December, 1945.

The House bill also would admit 2000 Czech refugees who fled their homeland after a Communist coup overthrew the government of Czechoslovakia last spring. The Senate measure made no provision for the Czechs, whose plight arose after the bill was originally drafted.

Orphan children—classified as "unmarried minors" who are DPs—will be admitted in the first priority group and given special nonquota immigration visas.

By a narrow margin, 92 to 88, the House beat down an attempt by Representative John M. Vorys to keep up United States immigration barriers until other nations were certified to have ac-

Koreans Report Bombing by Planes With U. S. Insignia

Seoul, Korea, (Saturday) June 12 (U.P.).—The Korean national police reported today that Korean fishing vessels in the sea of Japan were bombed Tuesday by nine four-engined aircraft bearing the Star and Circle insignia of the United States Air Force.

American authorities here insisted, however, that no Korean-based or Jap-based planes were in the area Tuesday. But authorities conceded that Japan-based aircraft have been using the bombed area for target practice.

The Korean chief of police of Oolung Island reported the planes bombed and strafed the small fishing fleet for 20 minutes, sinking 11 fishing boats and killing 14 Koreans and wounding 10.

8 Subcommittees to Tackle GOP Platform Job Next Week

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Eight separate GOP subcommittees will go to work on the 1948 Republican platform in Philadelphia next week under a streamlined plan to hammer out the planks by the time the convention meets on June 21.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. (R., Mass.), resolutions chairman, announced he personally will head the important foreign relations and national defense subcommittee.

Lodge also will captain the drafting subcommittee which will telescope unit recommendations into what he hopes will be a "short, readable, forthright and persuasive" platform.

Instead of the usual two days of full committee hearings, Lodge said the group will divide into separate subcommittees as soon as it organizes in Philadelphia Thursday morning, and each subcommittee will conduct its own hearings through Friday.

Over the Saturday and Sunday (June 19 and 20) weekend the drafting unit will fit together the recommendations of the individual subcommittees and report to the full committee June 21. The platform will be submitted to the convention the next day.

Besides the foreign relations and drafting subcommittees, Lodge will name these other resolutions units: agriculture, labor, economics and small business, civil rights and social welfare, western affairs and general governmental affairs. Registration of platform witnesses will start in Philadelphia Wednesday.

Lodge's leadership of the foreign relations unit appeared to assure adherence to the bipartisan foreign policy views of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), which he has followed consistently

Union Rejects Westinghouse Offer of 6% Wage Increase

Pittsburgh, June 11 (AP).—The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union today rejected a 6 per cent wage increase offered its 75,000 members by the Westinghouse Electric Corp.

The rejection came a few hours after the company had made the offer to the three unions recognized by Westinghouse. The others are the AFL Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Federation of Westinghouse Independent Unions. Representatives of these two unions had no comment.

A company statement said the offer, including an additional paid holiday for hourly employes, actually amounted to an 8.4 per cent hourly boost. Neither the company nor the unions disclosed present wage rates.

Edward J. Matthews, international representative of the Electrical Workers, said in a letter to Westinghouse that "the so-called 6 per cent wage and salary increase would provide Westinghouse employes with an increase in their take-home pay far below the increases agreed to between the major companies in the electrical manufacturing industry and our unions."

General Electric Rise Accepted by Workers

New York, June 11 (AP).—The CIO United Electrical Workers' conference board agreed today to take an 8 per cent wage boost offered by the General Electric Co. for 125,000 union employes. Membership approval was regarded as likely.

GE, the Nation's largest manufacturer of electrical products, said in making the offer that it would amount to a raise of from 9 to more than 15 cents an hour.

Jews, Arabs Charge Truce Violations

Jewish Protest

U. N. Mission Due to Reject British Craft

Lake Success, June 11 (NYHT).—The United Nations Palestine truce mission indicated tonight it has dropped any idea of using British ships of planes to carry its observers around the Holy Land, it was disclosed here after reports of such a plan had stirred up strong opposition from the Jews.

At the same time an urgent renewed appeal came from Count Folke Bernadotte for coast patrol vessels. The mediator asked Wednesday for six craft from the United States, France and Belgium—the three truce commission members—but no answers have been received.

There also were authoritative reports Bernadotte has asked the United States to furnish 10 more military observers.

This reported call is likely to interest the Russians, who have made a strong bid to send Soviet military observers. The Soviet offer is to be aired again when the council meets Tuesday.

Copyright, 1948, N. Y. Herald Tribune

Cairo, Egypt, June 11 (AP).—Palestine's truce halted two major battles and several other actions but produced charges of violations from both sides in its first day.

The Syrian charge d'affaires here was ordered to protest a second post-truce air attack on Damascus by Jewish planes at 6 p. m. tonight, and declared his country would not be bound by the truce if the violations continued.

Count Folke Bernadotte, the truce negotiator, announced he had ordered U. N. observers to investigate and report as quickly as possible on complaints alleging four separate violations by Jews.

At Tel Aviv the chief of operations of the Jewish high command said Arab forces had broken the truce on the northern, central and southern fronts of Palestine. He warned that the army of Israel might yet strike back against any ground thus gained.

Up to almost the last minute Jews and Arabs fought for major decisions on the Isdud front south of Tel Aviv, and around Latrun for control of the vital Jerusalem highway, dispatches from the fronts said today.

Jewish airmen first attacked Damascus at 1 a. m., EST.

Then nearly six hours after cease-fire orders were issued on all fronts, authoritative Trans-Jordan sources declared the Jews were continuing to attack the Syrians east of Mishmar Hay Yarden, in northeastern Palestine which the Syrians claimed to have occupied in a last-hour offensive yesterday.

An official Trans-Jordan source declared the Jews also broke the truce five hours after it became effective by launching a machine-gun attack on the airport town of Lydda and Wadi el Khyar between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem. The Arab Legion said its commanders did not return the fire.

An Israel communique on the other hand, charged that Arabs launched a "heavy attack" 30 minutes after the deadline on Sedjera.

An Associated Press correspondent said a salvo of 12 Egyptian shells greeted the truce 7 minutes after it went into effect on the Isdud front south of Tel Aviv.

Egyptian tanks this morning broke through the Jewish cordon that had held about 2000 Egyptians in a trap at Isdud, 23 miles south of Tel Aviv, for more than a week.

The Egyptians said 300 picked Israelis were killed in one phase of the battle but the Jews said they had countered their setback by taking two Arabs villages, Julis and Yassur, farther south which keep the Egyptian supply road under fire.

Also at Latrun, key to Tel Aviv-Jerusalem road, the Jews fought to the last minute to wrest the last possible inch of the vital highway from the reach of Arab guns.

An Arab legion communique claimed the Jews had been turned back in this last assault and that 160 Jews were killed, 100 wounded and 36 captured in a quick Arab counterattack at Barriya between Latrun and Ramle.

Jerusalem dispatches said that city spent a fearful night in the hours preceding the armistice, with artillery and mortar fire splitting the darkness from dusk to dawn and growing particularly fierce in the last 70 minutes before the truce.

Six minutes after the truce became effective, however, Jerusalem could look at its ruins in quiet.

Meanwhile, Count Bernadotte deployed his forces to enforce the truce if possible. Two light warships took stations off Tel Aviv and Jews assumed they were part of the international blockade which will try to keep arms and fighting personnel from reaching Palestine.

Seven American naval and Marine officers and a Swedish army officer arrived at Haifa to supervise the cease-fire operations there. Other observers were dispatched to Amman.

U. N. Council Defers Vote on Atomic Plan

Lake Success, June 11 (AP).—The Security Council today put off a vote on the American atomic control plan until next week when a Soviet veto is expected.

Russia has fought the United States proposal in the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission for the last two years.

United States Deputy Delegate Philip Jessup formally moved today that the council approve the American plan, originally laid down June 14, 1946, by Bernard M. Baruch. Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko blocked action by asking to speak at the next meeting, set for Wednesday.

10 Americans, Bent On Trip to Haifa, Lose Passports

New York, June 11 (AP).—The steamer Marine Carp sailed tonight for Mediterranean ports after the State Department had taken passports from 10 of her scheduled passengers, all Americans.

All those who lost their passports, and were forced to remain here, had passage to Haifa, Israel. One was a woman, Miss Rose Nemetz of Brooklyn.

The 10 were part of a group of 31 Americans of military age, apparently bound for Palestine. The remaining 21 were permitted to sail after "screening" of their passports by State Department agents.

The Marine Carp originally had been scheduled to depart at noon.

French Moroccan Official Stabbed

Oujda, French Morocco, June 11 (AP).—Mohamed Hajoui, Pacha of Oujda, was stabbed here today by a fanatic Moslem after the funerals of the Jewish victims of the June 7 riots.

French and Moslem authorities had attended the funerals.

Police said the attacker was the brother of a Moslem who was involved in Monday's rioting.

Doctors said Mohamed Hajoui's condition was serious.

Oujda is a city of 65,000 inhabitants, on the border of French Morocco and Algeria.

Security measures immediately were taken in Oujda and other Moroccan cities. Morocco was tense but quiet.

France Wants Military Pact With America

Paris, June 11 (AP). — France wants a military alliance with the United States, Foreign Minister George Bidault told Parliament today.

He made the statement in a plea for approval of the six-power London agreement on establishing a western German government and international control over the Ruhr. The agreement is expected to finally receive the approval of Parliament by a narrow margin after determined opposition by both rightists and by a narrow margin after determined opposition by both rightists and leftists. The cabinet authorized Premier Robert Schuman to stake the life of his government on a vote of confidence on the issue, if necessary.

Bidault said France wanted to sign a treaty with the United States similar to the military, economic and colonial alliance signed at Brussels by Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

"I do not know whether that is possible or under what condition," said the Foreign Minister.

Nearly 30 speakers were listed for the debate which was scheduled to end in a vote next Tuesday afternoon.

Bidault's speech for the most part met a stony silence from the Assembly.

He frankly admitted the government had only accepted the London agreement because it was the best it could get. He said he had "no enthusiasm" for the accord.

He pleaded for Assembly approval so as "not to isolate the fatherland."

The principal asset of the agreement, he said, was that it gave France a voice "in the control of the former arsenal of the Reich," the Ruhr.

Canadians to Boycott Beef—Too High at 60c

Ottawa, June 11 (AP).—Canadians, who still can buy sirloin steak at 60 cents a pound, are organizing a buyers' strike against beef prices.

The Ottawa Consumers' Association has called a beef boycott for next week. Beef jumped about 10 cents a pound in Canada recently

U. S.-Born Israeli Chief Killed Near Jerusalem

New York, June 11 (U.P.).—Col. David Marcus, 47, Brooklyn-born Jewish World War II hero recently named supreme commander of Israeli forces on the Jerusalem front, was killed last night while leading forces fighting to get food through to the Jewish residents of Jerusalem, it was announced today.

It was the first official disclosure that an American was in command of Jewish forces in Palestine.

Marcus went to Palestine about two months ago as an unofficial War Department observer to check on the strength of Jewish and Arab forces. He graduated from West Point in 1924.

A resident of Brooklyn, he was New York City commissioner of correction from 1933 to 1940. He was chief of planning of the civil affairs division of the War Department.

Marcus saw combat service in every theater and parachuted into Normandy on D-Day, where he was decorated for killing four Germans.

Bucharest, Romania, June 11 (AP).—Romania's Grand National Assembly unanimously approved today legislation to nationalize practically all the country's industries, mines, banks, insurance companies and transport.

The 31-article law approved today covers all middle-sized and large enterprises.

Foreign capital investment is hit by the law, but there are exceptions which seem to benefit three Soviet Union.

The law foresees the nationalization of the following enterprises: All metallurgical works employing more than 100 workers, including mining, processing and manufacturing.

All power plants and power-distributing companies. All coal, oil and natural gas extraction and processing.

It also covers the manufacture of bricks and glass. All firms in the housing, road and railroad construction business, and all furniture and timber processing plants using machinery having more than 50 horsepower.

House Vote on Draft Is Due Next Week

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

House Republican and Democratic leaders expressed confidence yesterday that the 19-through-25 draft bill will reach the floor next week for an expected favorable vote.

But before it does, these same leaders must convince two members of the 12-man House Rules Committee who are personally opposed to the draft to vote to let it come to the floor.

The rules body is the House's "political committee," which decides whether legislation written by other committees should be cleared for action or pigeonholed. To date, seven members of the rules group have opposed the draft and five have been for it.

Plan to Apply Needed Heat

Leaders are expected to put enough "heat" on the opponents to get them to vote out the bill. And after the Senate's thumping 78 to 10 approval of the measure Thursday, they predict the House will pass it by a comfortable margin.

Meanwhile, several members of the House are preparing amendments to offer when it comes up on the floor.

One of the most important will be presented by Representative James E. Van Zandt (R., Pa.). It would permit youths of 17 to volunteer for two years' military service with their parents' consent and discharge their obligation to serve 24 months when they are 19.

Van Zandt said the purpose of the change is to allow boys who graduate from high school when 17 to put in their time before going to college, rather than have to interrupt college later. He said the suggestion had come from a number of high school students.

House Speaker Joseph Martin (R., Mass.) said he hoped to bring up the draft bill Tuesday or Wednesday. He predicted it would pass with only one day of debate. The Senate spent a week on the measure, but House rules permit quicker action.

There was a report on Capitol Hill that House consideration of the draft would be postponed until after the Republican National Convention if Congress decides to return. GOP leaders, however, want to finish next Saturday night if at all possible, and Martin said yesterday he wanted to get the draft out of the way as soon as possible.

The Rules Committee meets Monday morning to vote on the measures. One member, Representative Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio), Senator Robert Taft's manager in the presidential campagn, will be in Philadelphia. He is opposed to the draft, but will be "paired" with a supporter, Representative J. Bayard Clark (D., N. C.), so his vote will count.

The Pennsylvanian also will offer an amendment to exempt all veterans, regardless of length of service, from the draft.

Chairman Leo E. Allen (R., Ill.) has said he will vote against clearing the bill, and three others who oppose the draft said yesterday they were inclined to vote nay. They are Representatives J. Edgar Chenoweth (R., Colo.), Robert F. Rich (R., Pa.) and Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.).

Representatives James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.), Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.), Eugene E. Cox (D., Ga.) and Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) favor the bill. Representative Ross Rizley (R., Okla.) reportedly has been on the fence but is likely to agree to let the House decide the issue.

Harkness in Key Position

This puts Representative Forest A. Harkness (R., Ind.) in the key position of deciding the vote, unless one of the opponents is won over by leadership pressure. Harkness, who was out of town yesterday, has appeared to disagree with the draft plan.

Representative Van Zandt said he also planned to introduce a series of amendments prepared by National Guard leaders, to define their mission and give them certain safeguards. He said he also might present an amendment to prevent veterans of the peacetime draft from getting 'superseniority" over war veterans in reemployment rights.

Fortunes to Fall

Drastic Slash In Germany's Currency Due

By Wes Gallagher
Post Reporter

Berlin, June 11 (AP).—A currency reform, aimed at taking from 70 to 90 per cent of the present inflated money out of circulation, appears imminent in western Germany.

The reform will mean the virtual wiping out of all private fortunes above 3000 marks (about $900).

Officials refuse comment, but unofficial sources give this over-all picture of Franco-Anglo-American plans to put western Germany on a self-sufficient financial basis:

1. The new western German mark will not have any immediate value on international markets. It is hoped eventually to give it an international value of 30 cents. Internally, the mark will be worth approximately 30 cents in services and goods by world standards. (The prewar mark was 40 cents.)

2. The new money reform will be the most drastic taken in western Europe—much more so than Germany's 1923 devaluation. Lowest unofficial estimates state it will take 70 per cent of the currency out of circulation. Highest estimates are 90 per cent. All savings of over 1000 marks probably will be wiped out or reduced to small fractions.

In the 1923 currency reform, there was a straight exchange of old marks for new with no limit on the number of marks to be exchanged. This time there is certain to be a limit on the number of marks to be exchanged, probably 3000 or fewer.

3. The new currency will be backed by western Germany's ability to produce. The currency issue will be limited to productive capacity.

The plan will be put into effect by the occupation powers so German officials will not be blamed.

Gallman Reported Next Envoy to Poland

London, June 11 (NYHT).—Waldemar J. Gallman, 49, Minister-Counselor at the American Embassy at London, will be the next United States Ambassador to Poland, it was learned today.

Gallman, a veteran of 26 years in the State Department foreign service, will succeed Stanton Griffis, who returned to the United States May 20 "for consultations."

He plans to return to Washington shortly to prepare for his new post. His appointment has not yet been announced by President Truman.

Candidates' Aid Backing Encourages Harriman

Rome, Italy, June 11 (U.P.).—W. Averell Harriman, roving American Ambassador for the European Recovery Program, said today he was "very hopeful" for the full success of ERP because American presidential candidates have urged Congress to support it "in full."

Harriman arrived in Rome from his headquarters in Paris. During a three-day visit to the Italian capital he expects to confer with President Luigi Einaudi, Premier Alcide de Gasperi, and Roberto Tremelloni, minister without portfolio, who is in charge of ERP plans for Italy. He also expects to talk with Count Carlo Sforza, the Italian Foreign Minister.

said they will support a drive to restore most of the cut."—Editor's Note.]

Earlier witnesses included Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who is leading the fight to get the full assistance program voted, and Harold E. Stassen, a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination. Stassen backed Vandenberg's stand.

With the funds fight approaching a climax, the State Department opened negotiations with the Marshall Plan countries on agreements covering (1) what the United States will give or loan the European countries, and (2) what those countries will do for themselves and for each other.

Sir Oliver Franks, the new British Ambassador, and Willard Thorpe, Assistant Secretary of State, took part in the first such session. Franks described the 75-minute meeting as "satisfactory." He told newsmen he expected most differences to be settled quickly. But he added that it would be surprising if one or two points do not require serious negotiation.

Marshall addressed the Senate group yesterday without a prepared statement.

Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) asked the Secretary if the failure of Congress to supply full funds to ECA would undermine the confidence of European countries in United States good intentions.

Marshall quickly said yes. "It is the crux of the whole thing," he said. "If they feel they cannot depend on us, we will have left them in a perilous state of mind."

And Marshall added, in obvious reference to the Soviet Union, that few Americans realize what courage the western European countries showed by going ahead with ECA "in the face of formidable and threatening opposition from the strongest country in Europe."

Summing up their views, Marshall called the House cuts "wasteful, unjustified and dangerous," while Hoffman said they were "unwise and shortsighted."

Would Decimate Machine Exports

Hoffman told the Senators the House-approved appropriation would mean slashing machinery shipments from $1,100,000,000 to $100,000,000. And large-scale shipments are needed now, the ECA head said, adding:

"The emergency is here. Our rate of expenditure during the next six months will determine whether we are now launching a true recovery program."

The Appropriations Committee called Hoffman, along with several military leaders, for further testimony tomorrow—in private. Chairman Bridges (R., N.H.) said he hopes the committee's report can be completed Monday.

Then the Senate as a whole will have to act. If its appropriation bill differs from the House-approved one, the problem of compromising Senate-House differences will arise. The commonest guess on Capitol Hill was that ECA won't get all it wants but will get much more than the House voted.

ECA has been going on the assumption it will get $5,300,000,000 for the first year, the amount "authorized" by Congress in March. The House bill cuts the total and requires the money to last three additional months. It makes similar cuts in several other foreign spending programs.

Printers Give Meyer Plaque At Anniversary Ceremony

Washington Post printers last night honored Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Post, on the fifteenth anniversary of the Meyer family's association with the paper.

In a kangaroo court ceremony held in the composing room, Meyer was presented with a silver-framed plaque that said in part: "It is gratifying, of course, to know that the paper is a material success—a success in which the printers have modestly participated.

"But it is even more satisfying to have participated, as mechanics of the art preservative, in an editorial and news content so competently organized and presented as to win nation-wide acclaim and world-wide comment."

Responding to the presentation made by Howard B. Wyche in behalf of The Washington Post Chapel of Columbia Union, International Typographical Union, Meyer said he was "proud of the organization that has been built here in these years.

"We have tried to set standards of decent journalism," he said, "and I feel that we have made real progress. All I can say is that I hope I can witness more of the progress made in the future."

Meyer became publisher of The Post, through purchase, June 13, 1933. Philip L. Graham, a son-in-law, who became president and publisher June 18, 1946, and Mrs. Graham were among those attending the brief ceremony.

Blowing of a whistle brought The Post's linotype machines to a halt for the kangaroo court.

Meyer was charged with "having, deliberately and with malice aforethought acquired the plant and premises at 1337 E st. nw. with the intention of conducting a LIBERAL newspaper, both nationally and internationally, and that he has so conducted such a newspaper on such premises," and further that "he has worked for many years for The Post without compensation. . . . This, in the opinion of the chapel, violates every rule of God and man. Therefore we ask that Mr. Meyer be sentenced to hard labor and placed on the composing room payroll and that the chapel constitute itself as the bargaining agent for Mr. Meyer, the Taft-Hartley Act to the contrary notwithstanding."

Convicted of these charges, following an address by Douglas S. Davenport, "prosecuting attorney," Meyer was sentenced by Wyche "to the hard labor of making up the editorial page," and being placed on the composing room payroll."

Following his conviction he was given an apron and a make-up rule.

Vandenberg Measure Voted

passed the House Foreign Affairs Committee and is awaiting a chance to reach the floor.

Vandenberg handled his resolution in gingerly fashion yesterday, as if he expected much greater opposition. In his opening speech, and in repeated answers to questions, he tried to assure the Senate that any American alignment with a European defense union would require Senate ratification.

The resolution, he said, "is a plan for our practical American cooperation under specified circumstances, within the framework of the United Nations.

"It encourages individual and collective self-defense within the Charter and outside the veto.

Fullbright Flanders Critical

"It declares our willingness to consider, by due constitutional process, our own cooperation in one way or another if we feel our own national interests are involved. But it warns that self-help and mutual aid are prerequisites.

"Our cooperation must be a supplement to, not a substitute for, the adequate and continuous defensive activities of others."

Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) complained that the resolution gave no encouragement to political union in Europe.

Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.), a supporter of the so-called Culbertson Plan for revising the charter at once, thought the resolution should make a stronger call for charter revision. Senators George W. Malone (D., Nev.) and Glen Taylor (D., Idaho) argued that the resolution was a step on the road to war.

But the debate did not really come to life until Senator Pepper launched into a long argument against regional pacts as a danger to peace. The League of Nations was destroyed, he said, by having too many collateral pacts like the Locarno Treaty formed outside it. "The same error," he warned, "will undermine the foundations of the UN."

Vandenberg's most fervent support yesterday came from Democratic Senators Walter F. George of Georgia and Carl A. Hatch of New Mexico. "We cannot decline to take this step at this time," said George, emphasizing the safeguards that surrounded it. And Hatch declared that "if this resolution will give these countries of Europe the courage they need to stand together, I'll vote for it."

Russians Hint They'll Quit Berlin Setup

Berlin, June 11 (AP).—The Soviet Official press hinted today that the Russians are considering withdrawing from he four-power rule of Berlin and attempting to substitute their own control over the city.

An editorial in Taegliche Rundschau said Allied Kommandatura efforts to solve the city's problems were seriously impeded by inner-Allied arguments, blamed on the three western powers.

Therefore, the newspaper said, Russian authorities are weighing two courses: Whether to try to continue running Berlin on a four-power basis or to resort to "direct negotiations between German authorities and the Soviet Administration in Germany."

Forbidden to Move

The German government of Brandenburg, in the Russian occupation zone, today forbade its residents to move into the American and British sectors, the first order of its kind imposed.

The Soviet news agency said tonight the United States military government had put American soldiers on nine locomotives at Anhalter Bahnhof in Berlin and that railroad officials were being hindered in carrying out their duties. United States officials said the engines always have been under American guard and that recently the guard was increased.

Reports Train Stopped

The agency also reported British troops stopped a Russian train traveling from Moscow to Paris at the zonal border in Germany. It said British military authorities ordered guards to remove their uniforms and weapons during the trip through the British zone. The British also asked for a list of all goods, the agency said. This is required by the Russians for British trains passing through the Russian zone.

Spellman Ends Tour

Los Angeles, June 11 (AP).—Francis Cardinal Spellman and 13 church dignitaries returned to the United States today from a 39,000-mile tour, during which he conferred with Emperor Hirohito.

Russian Colonel Met Death On Return, Paris Paper Says

Paris, June 11 (AP).—The newspaper France-Soir reported today that Russian Col. D. Tassoyev died in Soviet hands 24 hours after his "release" by British authorities.

In Berlin, Russians at the official Soviet news bureau said:

"That report is laughable—extremely laughable. Let France-Soir have such scoops."

The paper's Berlin correspondent said the British were compelled to turn Tassoyev over to the Russians in exchange for a former British staff member, Igor Klein, who was held by the Russians.

Tassoyev, a Russian reparations officer, disappeared from the American port of Bremen last April. The British Foreign Office announced he had asked asylum from the British.

Later, a day after Klein was returned to British officials in Germany, London announced Tassoyev was being returned to the Russian zone of Germany at his own request.

Moscow a few days later quoted him as saying he was kidnaped and was beaten while being held in London—charges which Foreign Secretary Bevin denied.

(At Berlin, British officials said "there was no question of there having been an exchange.")

GM to Lay Off 2500

Baltimore, June 11 (AP).—Nearly 2500 workers at the two General Motors plants in Baltimore will be laid off for seven days beginning June 21, plant officials said. The layoff will affect all 1500 employes at the Chevrolet assembly plant and all 1000 workers at the Fisher body plant. Steel shortage was blamed.

House Votes to Admit 200,000 DPs, 2000 Czechs to America

cepted a proportionate share of the homeless, many of whom have been living in DP camps since the end of the war.

Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) said other nations have already welcomed many thousands of refugees since the war ended. He cited figures that Britain has taken 50,000 and is taking more at the rate of 5000 a month while Belgium has taken 27,000, France 16,000 and Canada 50,000. Australia, New Zealand and Switzerland, Celler said, have also taken sizable groups.

The House knocked down several attempts to expand the bill to other than persons in DP camps.

One such amendment, which was successful in the Senate, would have admitted persons of German origin from Poland and Czechoslovakia who had fled into Germany before the march of the Soviet occupation armies.

The House voted 78 to 61 against this proposal by Representative Charles J. Kersten (R., Wis.) after Representative Mitchell Jenkins (R., Pa.) shouted that it would admit "Nazis and Quislings" who aided Hitler.

Three attempts to allow 18,000 members of General Anders' anti-Russian Polish army to come to the United States from England without regard to quota were defeated.

The House measure, backed by the powerful GOP leadership, went through without many of the Senate restrictions.

The bill does not contain a Senate provision requiring that 50 per cent of the DP's come from the Baltic states of Latvia, Estonia, Lithuanian and Eastern Poland and that 50 per cent of the total be farm workers.

The Senate bill also would require that it be determined in advance that refugees will not displace Americans in their homes and jobs. The House bill does not contain this provision.

Both bills provide for rigid screening of all incoming DPs to bar Communists and other "undesirables."

The House bill charged the refugees against regular immigration quotas, and stated that at least 50 per cent of each country's quota must be left open for nonrefugees.

The House measure also would allow 15,000 refugees already here to remain in this country, if they meet other qualifications. The Senate bill does not contain this provision.

Greece Gets Bulgaria Bid To Renew Ties

Athens, Greece, June 11 (U.P.).—Communist-dominated Bulgaria today offered to resume diplomatic relations with Greece, as Guerila Gen. Markos Vafiades renewed his offer to discuss a peaceful settlement of the Greek civil war.

Diplomatic circles here speculated that the Bulgarian offer, submitted through the United Nations, meant that Foreign Communists might be ready to end their alleged aid to the guerillas in line with Russia's current "peace offensive."

Markos' new peace offer, broadcast by the guerilla radio, denounced the Truman Doctrine as "the basic cause of bloodshed and chaos" in Greece. Political observers predicted today's proposal would be rejected by the Greek government, as was Markos' first offer last week.

The Greek delegate at Lake Success notified the government of the Bulgarian overture, sent to U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie by Vasil Kolarov, Communist Foreign Minister of Bulgaria.

Kolarov's message said that Bulgaria intended to start negotiations at once. It was believed that the first approaches would be handled through the Greek and Bulgarian Embassies in Washington.

The offer, if approved, would seal off the guerillas' alleged supply and escape routes along nearly half of Greece's northern frontier.

Some diplomatic sources believed Bulgaria, Albania and Yugoslavia are tired of supporting the guerillas in their gradually losing battle. They also believed that the offer to resume relations might be part of a general Soviet plan to ease tension in the Balkans.

Russian Calls Jazz Sinister Device of U. S.

Moscow, June 11 (U.P.).—The Russians added a new note today to their propaganda campaign against American "imperialists." Pravda, official Soviet publication, said the United States is engaging in a sort of musical imperialism by sending its jazz tunes wafting over the seven seas.

Georgi Khubov, writing in Pravda, declared the American people are victims of a conspiracy by monopolies to dull their minds through music fit only for gangsters.

Khubov said the United States is the center of degenerate modernism in music, which has been turned into a profitable business by a group of monopolies. These monopolies, he said, dictate to composers what they may write.

(Khubov made no mention of the recent Communist edict to Russian composers instructing them how to write music.)

"Modern American decadent music, in which jazz and bacchanalia reign, with its frenzied inside-out rythm, with its wild naturalitic sound imitations, with its cynically naked sexuality, with its screaming, howling and rattling, is capable of satisfying only the low taste of gangsters," Khubov declared.

The day will feature sports events, a staff luncheon addressed by the Surgeon General, Rear Admiral C. A. Swanson; Lieut. Comdr. D. J. O'Brien, MSC, and Vernon Richardson, hospital corpsman 3/c, a Marine Corps Band concert and ball game in the afternoon, and a supper and dance in the evening.

Planes to Aid National Televsion Broadcasts

A plan to blanket the entire United States with television broadcsats through a series of high-altitude airplane relay stations was disclosed yesterday by officials of the Westinghouse Electric Corp. and the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Co.

An experimental "stratovision" station in a converted B-29 bomber flying at 25,000 feet, has successfully relayed a local sports video program as far west as Cleveland, nearly 300 miles. This is far beyond the normal earth-bound horizon-distance limitations of such transmissions.

Librarians Install Officers; D. C. Woman Vice President

LIBRARIANS IN THE LIBRARY—Florence Rice (kneeling), assistant librarian of The Washington Post, shows our files to visiting members of The Librarian Association

The Special Libraries Association installed Miss Rose L. Vormelker, head of the Business Information Bureau of the Cleveland Public Library, as its new president at a luncheon meeting here yesterday.

Mrs. Ruth H. Hooker, Naval Research Librarian of Washington, was installed as first vice president of the group, which is holding its thirty-ninth annual convention at the Statler this week.

The group voted to raise dues for associate, active, and institutional members, and voted to set up an award for "outstanding professional achievement" to be given annually to one of its members.

The Washington Post played host yesterday to about 60 members of the newspaper group of the Special Libraries Association, who visited other newspaper and magazine libraries in the afternoon.

The newspaper group elected the following officers: Agnes C. Henebry, Decatur (Ill.) Herald Review, chairman; Mrs. Alice Schramm, Milwaukee Journal, vice chairman; Robert E. Grayson, New York Herald Tribune, secretary-treasurer; Arthur C. Smyth, Buffalo Evening News, and Joseph E. Molloy, Philadelphia Inquirer, executive board.

The 1400 delegates to convention held separate business sessions yesterday morning, and attended receptions given by various special libraries in Washington during the afternoon.

The Pan American Union entertained the association at 4:30 p. m., and 250 of the librarians concluded their day with a visit to the Third Annual Sidewalk Fair, sponsored by the D. C. Public Library's Southwest branch at 7th and I sts., sw.

Sales Tax

Senator Johnson of South Carolina defended his action in blocking Senate consideration of the District sales tax on the ground that the tax falls most heavily on the "little fellow who cannot afford it." A very convincing reply to that familiar complaint was given by Representative Dirksen in course of the House debate on the District revenue bill. "No matter what the tax is," he said, "it constitutes a burden upon the individual or upon the family; and you cannot dissociate one tax from the whole pattern and then make comparisons with them." In other words, the assumption that the revenue needs of the District can be met by increasing real estate taxes—the certain consequence of a failure to enact sales tax legislation—is false. For, as Mr. Dirksen pointed out, every Government worker and every family that buys a house has to pay the increased taxes. Moreover, every increase in real estate taxes leads to rent increases that are felt by rich and poor alike.

Real estate taxes have recently been sharply increased and another substantial increase will follow unless alternative revenues from taxation are found. That may not happen during the coming fiscal year, if Congress delays action on pay increases for Federal and District employes. But Representative Bates declares that the budgetary deficits that lie ahead would just about double the tax burden on property owners within a two-year period unless new sources of revenue are found. The type of sales tax proposed for the District exempts foods and medicines from the tax, thereby greatly minimizing its impact on low-income families. And, as a compensatory offset for families with moderate incomes, the House bill also restricts payment of District income taxes to persons, domiciled in the District or residing here at least seven months, whose incomes exceed $8000.

The District has to raise additional revenue somehow, and the sales tax is a good, dependable revenue producer. In the form proposed, it is probably the least burdensome kind of tax that could be devised for the purpose of budget-balancing. Incidentally, the low-income families, whose outlays will be increased somewhat by payment of sales taxes, will be the chief beneficiaries of a revenue-raising plan that will help to pay for community services that contribute to their own well-being.

House Please Copy

The two-year draft bill which the Senate finally passed Thursday after arduous debate will permit a considerable bolstering of the national security. It will permit this, that is, if the House follows suit. Unfortunately there is no assurance that such will be the case, for the measure still rests in the Rules Committee, which has become a veritable zoo of caged legislation. Despite the overwhelming 78-10 Senate vote in favor of the draft, Rules Committee Chairman Leo Allen has announced that he will endeavor to prevent the bill coming to the House floor. This is indeed a terrible responsibility for any member of Congress to take on himself, and the blithe disregard with which Mr. Allen assumes it speaks poorly for his qualifications as a committee chairman.

There was never much danger that the Senate would not pass selective service in some form. That the draft emerged in such substantially sound shape is a tribute to the foresight of those Senators who stuck to the main purpose and fought off crippling amendments. The bill as passed contains no reference to racial segregation—a victory for tolerance and good sense. Moreover, the Senators struck out one other section which would have amounted to a shoddy evasion of responsibility. That would have placed on the President the onus of placing the draft in effect. Wisely the Senate spurned this political trickery and accepted its own duty for seeing that the armed forces have the manpower an adequate defense requires.

The Senate bill will permit the draft of sufficient men between the ages of 19 and 25 to bring the armed forces to their new statutory strength of 1,936,000. It also makes provision that 161,000 18-year-olds may volunteer for one year of service in a sort of backdoor approach to universal military training. One of the most salient features is one that empowers the President to require industrial concerns to give priority to defense orders at a fair price on penalty of seizure. While this provision may never be used, its inclusion is essential to guarantee a balanced defense program that does not fall disproportionately on Americans of draft age. Although the Senate bill is specific on exemption of married men, students and the like, it leaves up to administrative regulation the deferment of medical and other scientific personnel. That places a special compulsion on the President to scrutinize carefully service requests and to make sure that hospitals and laboratories are not stripped as they were during the war.

One encouraging omen of House action is Speaker Martin's prediction that the bill will pass next week with only one day of debate. Representative Allen and his committee colleagues hold a near-absolute checkrein, however, and they must act before the House as a whole can act. A little persuasion on the part of Speaker Martin and Majority Leader Halleck to bring the Rules Committee in line with the national interest would not be amiss.

West Of Asia

Sometimes the phrase "iron curtain" seems to add to the difficulties in international relations as well as to recognize those difficulties. The iron curtain appears to be regarded as a barrier to respect rather than as a barrier to break down. Certainly the success of the ECA program depends to a great extent upon the promotion of a working relation between east and west Europe. For a time such an object, which is one of the declared aims of ECA, was forgotten in the desire to boycott countries within the Soviet sphere. Now there seems to be some relaxation in this attitude, and the Administration, knowing that a dollar of aid in the Russian area would spell two dollars or more to western Europe's recovery, is taking advantage of it.

Several straws have accumulated as evidence of this tendency. Secretary Sawyer has expressed a feeling against embargoes on general trade with Russia and eastern Europe. In Paris, Mr. Harriman, his predecessor and ECA's roving ambassador in Europe, is showing concern over the running down of intra-European trade. This is due only in part, of course, to east-west difficulties, but these bulk large, however, in intra-European deterioration. Acts are being suited to words. Finland, which is not back of the iron curtain but is more or less athwart it, was recently given permission to import industrial equipment with which Finland will improve its production and therefore its trading position. The Department of Commerce also has licensed the export of coal-mine equipment to Poland. By assisting Poland to increase its coal output, the United States will be making a contribution to the economic recovery of western Europe, for the wheels of European industry depend a lot on Polish coal. In general, by permitting nonparticipating eastern countries to obtain supplies and equipment here, the United States would enable those countries to buy more from their western neighbors.

One of the chief advantages from our viewpoint of a west European revival of trade with Poland and other eastern European countries will be the resultant lessened dependence of Europe upon dollars as a means of paying for imports. It is not our purpose, for example, to help Poland gain more dollars from customer countries, but to enable those customers to exchange their surpluses for materials and goods that Poland can furnish. Since economic recovery is a relatively slow process, it may be necessary to provide dollar means of payment for certain eastern European products—in other words, permit ECA dollars to be used in limited amounts for purchases in countries in the Soviet sphere of influence. But any such channeling of dollars should be only a temporary expedient, and the nations benefiting from it should be given fair warning that the United States expects them to create their own means of payment in goods offered in exchange for goods.

Good Work In House

The housing bill has been sent on its way to enactment by the House Banking and Currency Committee, it is said, because a Congressman from Philadelphia switched his vote in favor of crucial amendments after "catching hell" from his constituents. Legislators from other slum-ridden communities with thousands of overcrowded families may well take note of the incident. Apparently the people, especially those living in the larger cities, are intensely interested in this measure. Votes against it are likely to be a heavy liability to any legislator in November.

The Banking and Currency Committee is to be especially congratulated for saving the bill from the emasculation it had suffered at the hands of the committee's own chairman, Jesse P. Wolcott. With crass disregard for the efforts of his fellow Republican, Senator Taft, Mr. Wolcott had transformed the comprehensive housing policy approved by the Senate to a narrow device for aiding the private housing industry. Now the committee has added to Mr. Wolcott's measure those sections of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill dealing with public housing, slum clearance, urban redevelopment, farm housing and housing research. It becomes once more a well-rounded policy worthy of support from every member of the House who is genuinely interested in the welfare of the people. The approval of such a bill in the face of Mr. Wolcott's opposition is a truly remarkable achievement.

The bill still has to clear the hurdles of the Rules Committee and a vote in the House itself, but the outlook is encouraging. Rules Chairman Allen has asked the Republican Steering Committee for guidance. That should scarcely have been necessary in view of Speaker Martin's promise that action on the bill will be taken before June 19. But at least it shows a proper deference on the part of the Rules chieftain to a higher leadership council. Only a colossal double-cross could now keep the House from voting on the measure, and there is no reason to believe that such a betrayal of the public interest is in the making. Once the measure gets to the floor, we doubt that the pressure of the real estate lobby against it can equal the pressure from a wide variety of citizen groups in its favor.

Joshua Liebman

The sudden and premature death of Rabbi Joshua Loth Liebman has doubtless brought a sense of intimate loss to many hundreds of thousands of persons who never knew him, but who profited, or believed they profited, from his book, Peace of Mind. In nearly two years since its publication this book, which is, after all, a work of homiletics written in the idiom of modern psychiatry, has rarely fallen from its position at the top of the list of best sellers.

The obvious explanation of this astonishing and indeed unprecedented success is that a very large proportion of the American people do not have peace of mind and grasp desperately at any formula or prescription that promises it. The question why so many of us suffer from unhappiness is a little more difficult. Are our fears and neuroses produced by the character of the society and civilization we inhabit or are the disorders of society and civilization the reflections of our spiritual sicknesses?

All Communists, most Socialists and even many of those who detest the pervasive banality and ugliness of industrial civilization would say that the primary corruption is external to the individual. Christianity for that matter has always opposed salvation to the values of this world. The most frequent answer given nowadays and the one given by Dr. Liebman himself, is that the primary evil is in ourselves. However, Dr. Liebman felt it necessary to qualify the answer somewhat:

> It is undoubtedly true that social circumstances do profoundly modify our human responses, and unjust conditions do create neuroses and maladjustments in countless personalities. Social reformers and revolutionaries are right when they insist that multitudes of human beings can never experience true peace of mind so long as they are compelled to engage in a relentless and too frequently defeating battle for work and bread . . . Yet in any society certain universal psychological reactions will manifest themselves . . . and men and women will have to learn then as now, how to manage their psychic needs and conflicts with a greater security.

This is to suggest that the basic social disorder is material poverty. The explanation is not wholly plausible in view of the fact that a greater distribution of material good has been achieved in our own age and society than in any other in history. Another explanation, however, might be that a good deal of unhappiness arises from the tendency, less pronounced now than a generation ago, to measure the worth of men less in terms of their moral qualities than in terms of their material achievements or certain arbitrary gifts or advantages, such as intelligence or education. Thus the price of contentment may be a social disapprobation which few have the courage to incur.

Iowa Revolt

What amounted virtually to an agrarian revolt in the Iowa primaries last week has been overshadowed by the abundance of other political news. The overturn of an incumbent Governor by a challenger from within his own party is almost unprecedented; yet the Republican Gov. Robert D. Blue was overwhelmingly beaten by William S. Beardsley, a small-town druggist. Undoubtedly this astonishing result reflects in part the growing strength of organized labor in Iowa. Governor Blue was unpopular with unions because of restrictive labor laws passed during his administration. The same forces probably helped account for the defeat of Congressman John W. Gwynne. Mr. Gwynne's record in Congress has not been regarded as favorable to labor, and recently his home city of Waterloo was the scene of a violent packinghouse strike that required troops to maintain order.

Iowa, however, is predominantly an agricultural State, and the upsets would not have been possible without considerable dissatisfaction on the part of farmers. The dissatisfaction was manifested toward many aspects of the Blue regime, but centered primarily on fiscal policy, which farmers apparently believed was dictated by special interests. Specifically there was resentment over reduction of the State income tax, an economy which farmers evidently felt could be better directed toward abolition of the sales tax. The discontent culminated in a great effort by farm organizations to get out the vote. And the results indicate that as political education becomes more extensive, normally conservative Iowa can no longer be considered in the old-line political bag.

THE LOST FOREST

My sorrow weaves upon the rain
A woodland dusk, a beechen gloss,
A leafdark speaking wind again,
My face is deep in mould and moss.

Through beeches underwater far
The night is seeping from the ground—
Oh life, oh loss I know they are Cut down and dead! And yet I found

My yesterday so faint, so clear,
Beloved image washed of dross.
The trees are gone and I am here,
How much of me, oh life, oh loss?

How much of me went down when these
Were felled? How long till I foreswear
The half of me logged with these trees,
A woodland sight that is not there?

Back-Door Socialism

The Washington Post, I'm sure, is a firm believer in free enterprise and hates socialism like the devil. This is why I find an interesting historical note in your June 6 editorial on the basing point system of prices.

You conclude that since the cement and steel industries have fallen afoul of the antitrust law, the law will be amended to conform to industry practice. You could find precedent for this in the action of Congress freeing railroads and fire insurance companies from the restraints of that law.

When the private government of a big business finds a Government law in its way, most anyone knows that the Government will be found guilty and the business exonerated. However, you go on to say we must have public price fixing to "regulate" these industries which Congress makes immune from the antitrust law. This is where the historical note comes in.

While you deplore socialism, and businessmen make speeches against it, you are all moving us irretrievably in the socialist direction. To be sure, Government price fixing for a while will follow the ICC pattern, protecting private capital at public expense, and doing such a good job at it that the public will be forced to learn how to get along with the least possible use of the favored industry's services. Note how the steel companies are switching to truck deliveries as a result of increased freight rates. This is the process by which eventually the Government will be forced to own the railroads. So it will be with steel and cement after a period of Government price fixing.

All around us private enterprise is refusing to remain private. It refuses to accept the risks of enterprise; it invokes public laws to protect it from competition whenever its private laws to restrain competitors break down, or the court catches up with them.

In many ways today Government shares the risks, but profits remain exclusively private property. This is a half-way socialism which can only lead in the end to a frank acknowledgment of public responsibility where private risk-taking abdicates. Since business is forcing socialistic patterns upon us, we might do better to know where we're going rather than to stumble into it hind end to. Silly, isn't it?

Segregated Playgrounds

Much discussion has taken place concerning segregated playgrounds in the Nation's Capital. Arguments have been set forth as to the feasibility of colored and white children playing together, the feasibility of changing the pattern of segregation found in the city schools. One side cites the fact that dual facilities are costly; the other side says customs must be followed.

I am going to present the position of a Negro parent. I have a 5-year-old son and to me like any other father, I think he is "tops" and want the best in life for him. I live about three doors from one of the largest playgrounds in the Northeast section. As yet I have been unable to explain to him why he can not go on the playground and play with other children.

Several of the colored boys in the block go and watch the playground activities through the fence, but some of the other parents and I feel very resentful of the underlying implications that our children aren't good enough to go on the playground.

Every time I hear brakes screech my heart skips a beat, because although I have taught my son not to go in the street, I dread the day that he might dash after a ball or ride his tricycle off the curb. If my son should play ball and break a window he is classed as a vandal. As he grows older—if he and his friends play on the corner or streets they are classed as hoodlums.

The white parents in my neighborhood are more fortunate than I. When their children grow older they can send them to the corner to the drug store or 10-cent store to buy a sundae or soda. They can send their children to the neighborhood movies, or swimming pools. All of these things are privileges that have been enjoyed by the poorest person in America, but cannot be enjoyed by my children or the children of the richest colored child at any cost.

No arguments or pleas will ever make me believe that this second-class citizenship should be perpetuated.

National Theater

If we had more men like Mr. Heiman in our country today, who have the courage to live their beliefs, we would not be in this unbearable mess.

The conservatives, who founded this country, and feel that this serious question (race segregation) should be allowed to mature naturally and not be forced by politicians and ultra-idealists a thousand years before both races are ready for it, have taken just about as much beating as they can endure. God seems to have given man the right to choose with whom he wishes to live, work and play without harming either side and our sainted editors (see editorial of June 6) could surely do the same.

Palestine Arabs

Eunice Burks asked in her letter of June 1, "Are they (the Arabs) not justified in fighting against eviction from or partition of their home? . . . " I find it difficult to believe that the Arab bloc has any more right to decide who shall be admitted into Palestine than Canada or Mexico has to decide who shall be admitted into the U. S. A. The Palestinian Arabs are not opposed to Jewish immigration, and are not in the Arab bloc.

The Arab kings would have welcomed the entry of a submissive people, ready to accept the feudal collar. One can understand their reluctance to have as neighbors a progressive people who converted a desert into arable land, who built cities where there had been tents, and universities where there had been illiteracy. They have good reason to fear the awakening of their enslaved subjects, living in proximity to a people who have raised the standard of living of their friends, the Palestinian Arabs, as well as their own.

"Age In The Senate"

I have read your June 8 attack on Senator Arthur Capper under the caption, "Age in the Senate."

To me it is a cruel unjustified attack on a man that has been the best friend the District of Columbia has had in the United States Senate. Senator Capper is still capable of wise decisions.

The best way a man can serve in the Senate is to be able to see the weakness of many things that come before the committees and block the ones that do not seem to be in the public interest.

I knew Senator Capper first when he was Governor of Kansas and have had dealings with him on public matters constantly ever since he came to the Senate. To date I find his judgment as keen as it was in his first years in the Senate.

Your attack is a cruel sting to a man who does not deserve such an attack. It's politics out in Kansas that is after him, not his age.

Guatemala Replies To Sumner Welles

In the June 1 edition of The Washington Post, there appeared an article signed by Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State during President Roosevelt's Administration. Under the title of "Caribbean Storm," Mr. Welles deals with important matters of Central America.

What is noticeable is that such an illustrious person as Sumner Welles, generally so well informed on what occurs in Latin America and so well intentioned toward these countries, should now be completely disorientated, repeating information that comes from interested sources.

With respect to the declarations that refer to Costa Rica, their embassy in Washington has rectified them.

Mr. Welles assures that the government of Guatemala is interested in the developments in Costa Rica. This would be nothing strange if you consider that Guatamala must always be interested in all the occurrences in Central America.

What is strange and, on the other hand reveals that the sources of information of Mr. Welles are neither just nor impartial, is that he qualified as "unfortunate" that interest, and echoes those declarations which are spread by some anti-democratic regimes in Latin America, branding the present Guatemalan government as communistic, only because it has given the people a labor code and has favored social justice for the masses, whom the dictatorships have held in misery for the past decades.

With great ignorance he calls "fanatic" Dr. Arevalo, when it is known publicly that one of the characteristics of the President of Guatemala is precisely his ample and serene judgment.

But what brings out more of Mr. Welles' disorientation is that without justified knowledge he qualifies "as the most dangerous obsession of Dr. Arevalo," the efforts of the Guatemalan government in favor of the Union of Central America, which has been for over 100 years the greatest aspiration of the peoples of the Isthmus. Neither Dr. Arevalo nor any of the members of the Guatemalan government have ever thought of materializing such a union with the means of force and violence.

Finally, it is surprising that when referring to Guatemala's thesis against the colonial system in the Americas, Mr. Welles forgets all the traditions of his own country, the United States of America. On this point no American can deny the noble attitude of Monroe, Jefferson, Madison and so many others, such as the unforgettable Franklin D. Roosevelt, who have condemned piracy and colonialism.

We can only lament these unjust and unfounded observations of Welles, precisely for the prestige of his personality and for the respect that up until now his declarations merited in Guatemala in spite of his repeated praise of dictators in the Americas as the free expressions of an honest man, acquainted with the problems of America and friend of the people of Latin America.

Long Range Housing Needs

By Malvina Lindsay

More Breathing Space

ONE CHERISHED dream of the average American is for more room and more privacy. Yet houses have been shrinking in the last half century. They will probably continue to shrink—costs being what they are—unless Congress passes a housing bill with provision for a Government-sponsored research program.

Only by such a program, say housing authorities, can homes be developed to meet the needs of the people—at a price they can pay. Only by long-range coordinated housing research under Government leadership—such as now is developing better pigs and atomic bombs—can more room and more comfort in living be made possible on a mass scale for Americans.

Legislative patchwork on housing by this Congress, as the substitute Wolcott bill proposed, might spur some types of construction for a few years. But it would further delay the facing of the country's big problem of horse-and-buggy housing. The Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill, passed by the Senate and now approved by the House Banking Committee, provides for the research program. The report of the Joint Congressional Committee on Housing pointed out the need of integrated research under Government auspices and suggested an agency for this be established under the Housing and Home Finance Administration. But the Wolcott housing measure eliminated Government research together with other public welfare provisions of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, including slum clearance and limited low-cost public housing.

AMONG THE many housing needs of American families are houses with more bedrooms. Young married couples with increasing families look to the time when more sleeping and play space, and quiet places to study, will be available to their children, and when they themselves can have a sanctuary for frazzled nerves. The increasing number of older people in the population, especially women (including many mothers-in-law), also creates a need for more space for two-generation families.

Grown-up children are seeking more space and privacy. They are also tending to leave home before marriage and set up abodes of their own, which calls for more housing units. Single persons generally are living alone more than ever before—and liking it. Everywhere people are reaching out for more breathing space. "A room of one's own," once a wistful aspiration, is coming to be looked upon as a reasonable human right.

However, many Americans can only dream of the privacy they cannot afford. What is more, some real estate men and builders would send the single persons who occupy separate units back to their families, boarding houses or wherever they came from as a means of solving the housing shortage. There is plenty of housing, say advocates of this plan, if persons living alone would double up as in prewar days, and if families didn't have such inflated ideas about space.

NEVERTHELESS the longing for space to spread one's wings is too strong an attribute of 100 per cent Americanism to be checked by an admonition. It comes by way of pioneer and rural background. It is a part of American independence and rugged individualism.

"More room" is what the average American is going to keep on wanting, seeking and needing. For as housing studies have shown, it contributes to health, family stability, personal development and happiness, and is a curb on juvenile delinquency and divorce.

The costs of course come high. They are such now that relatively few families and individuals can have the space needed for comfort and decent privacy. Only if housing costs eventually are cut by the coordinated research of Government and industry and mass production attained will Americans get more and better living space. Only thus may they escape the anthill existence that comes to people whose housing lags the population and the times.

Aid To Education

Are we to believe that mobilization of our resources for military purposes is to be so complete that not even a small fraction of one billion of Federal money can be spent yearly for aid to basic education?

We are spending many billions for the present military program and the enlargement of the Air Force will make necessary the spending of still more billions. We are also sending quite a few billions to Europe for rehabilitation. There may be a limit to what we can afford, but still one cannot believe that this limit is suddenly reached at the moment when a proposal is brought forward to spend from one fifth and one third of one billion yearly for our own poorest children.

It is estimated that about two million American children are entirely without schooling and that many more have schooling inadequate to insure even a good basic education. Surely thoughtful people cannot doubt either our ability or our duty to send to these needy children of our own the comparatively small amount mentioned in the plan for Federal aid to education.

The richest Nation in the world can afford to educate its children. If some sections are too poor to finance good schools, other sections can and should give aid. This can be done through aid to education, and whatever may be the argument against any given bill for this purpose, the need for economy is not one of the valid ones.

Foreign Service

A Communication

IN AN editorial, "Headache for ECA" published on April 24, The Washington Post comments on a plan for an "Overseas Administration Corps" proposed in an article in the New York Times of April 18 by Donald H. McLean. The Washington Post joins Mr. McLean in calling for action to solve the personnel difficulties which have arisen with the increased overseas activities of the United States Government. Mr. McLean recommends that another agency, the Overseas Administration Corps, be established and that to it be assigned such functions as the administration of the European Recovery Program and the government of occupied areas.

The Government's need for an increasing number of persons competent to deal with the complex, specialized problems of our foreign relations cannot be denied; neither can the need for the liberalization of personnel procedures and salary scales. It does not follow, however, that these needs can best be met by the establishment of still another agency. Logic would seem to point to the use of an agency already existing and charged with the conduct of our foreign relations: the Foreign Service. In so doing, advantage could be taken of experienced personnel and proven procedures.

The Foreign Service has endeavored not only to mold its own organization to fit the increasing demands made on it, but it has also sought to create new instruments through which it might continue to function at maximum usefulness. This is a policy manifested in the recent creation of the Foreign Service Reserve.

THE DEVELOPMENT of a "reserve" for the Foreign Service began with the need for such an agency during the war. The extraordinary wartime demands on the facilities of the Foreign Service resulted in an increase not only in the number but also in the types of personnel sent to staff the nearly 300 consular and diplomatic posts abroad. Even with a quadrupled staff, however, the personnel needs were still not filled.

Furthermore, during the war there were established such agencies as the Foreign Economic Administration. Office of Strategic Services and Office of War Information which had personnel abroad. The use of so many different agencies to perform roughly some of the same functions served also to point up the need for expanding the Foreign Service to meet all the demands of this Government relative to the conduct of its relations with other nations.

Expansion of this sort meant the inclusion in the service of men with specialized knowledge and experience, men with the background needed to make the Foreign Service the type of organization that Mr. McLean proposes.

TO ATTRACT this personnel, it was necessary to work out a plan including just such inducements to trained specialists as Mr. McLean would have instituted in his proposed agency. The measures proposed by Mr. McLean, and are substantially the measures authorized by the Foreign Service Act of 1946.

Under this act, provision is made ". . . for the temporary appointment or assignment to the Foreign Service of representative and outstanding citizens of the United States possessing special skills and abilities." Through this provision, the Foreign Service is afforded an efficient and flexible means of gaining the services of specialists from other Government agencies or from outside the Government. The specialists recruited under this provision may serve for periods up to four years and may be assigned to any post at which their skills are required.

Members of the Foreign Service Reserve may receive salaries ranging up to $13,500 and in addition receive allowances which partially reimburse them for expenses directly incurred by reason of their assignments under orders and as a result of the nature of their official duties. Thus, the compensation of the top-grade reserve officers comes well within the salary range proposed by Mr. McLean. Furthermore, reserve officers enjoy other benefits granted under the Foreign Service Act of 1946, including annual leave, hospitalization and medical services for illness or injury incurred in the line of duty.

OFFICERS assigned to the reserve from other Government agencies are entitled to reinstatement in the positions which they held at the time of their assignment or in corresponding or higher positions. They received all within-grade salary advancements which they would have received had they remained in their regular positions. They may also transfer any unused leave accumulated in the reserve to the agency of their regular employment. Reserve officers participate in the Civil Service retirement system and are given credit for time served in the reserve, just as if it were served at their regular jobs.

The recommendations of Mr. McLean and The Washington Post with regard to in-service training have also been met in the provisions of the act of 1946. This act authorized the establishment of the Foreign Service Institute. The institute is now in operation and engaged in instructing old and new officers in languages, consular and diplomatic procedure, the background of policy formulation, and other similar subjects with which field officers must be acquainted. Further provision is made for assigning officers to public or private institutions, trade, labor, agricultural or scientific associations, or commercial firms for specialized training.

The theory of the reserve as envisaged in the act of 1946 has proven practicable. The reserve was established immediately upon the passage of the act, and, by December 1947, there were 210 reserve officers on duty abroad. These officers included 79 engaged in the Foreign Service's "regular program," 11 in the research and intelligence program, 5 in the Mission for Economic Affairs at Geneva, 13 in the post-UNRRA and interim aid program, and 102 in the information and educational program.

A GOOD example of the practicability of the reserve idea is found in the composition of the staff of the chief of scientific officers at the American Embassy in London. This group of reserve officers fills the same need in the field of science and technology as commercial attaches fill in the field of economics and trade. The group is made up of top-flight scientific personnel directed by one of the outstanding biochemists of the United States.

The services performed by this group with respect to the exchange of scientific and technological information could hardly have been performed by the regular officers of the Foreign Service. On the other hand, because technicians are seldom available for periods longer than one or two years, the simplest method by which they could be made available to the Foreign Service for such programs as that of the London office is the method adopted in the Foreign Service Reserve.

Through careful planning and long-term experience, the Foreign Service is being built into an organization which can meet the demands of this Government abroad as adequate funds are made available for it to do so. Now there is lacking only a fuller understanding on the part of both the public and of Government officials of the possibilities of the powers now granted the Foreign Service, together with the will to employ those powers to the maximum advantage.

The above represents my personal views.

Off The Record

Point in Fight Won by Lewis

However, the money has been frozen because of the disagreement over pensions for the miners.

The 1946 money is running out, and Lewis contends that the trustees have a "moral obligation" to continue the distress payments.

Van Horn described yesterday's action as "just a paper transaction" because, he said, the money in the 1947 fund still remains frozen.

The whole question will come before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough on June 19.

Van Horn offered a resolution which was defeated limiting the pension payments to 50 per cent of all assets. This would amount to about $25,000,000 annually.

Van Horn said that the resolution which was adopted over his objection would burden the 1947 welfare and retirement fund with $19,000,000 worth of obligations "improvidently made by the trustees of the 1946 welfare and retirement fund, when they did not have the money on hand to pay the same."

Van Horn said he objected to the Bridges-Lewis resolution because the attempted benefits and obligations "are in direct violation" of the Taft-Hartley Act and the wage agreement of last July.

To Lewis' Defense

The operator who came to Lewis' defense was H. K. Cook of Knoxville, Tenn. He said he spoke for 500 small companies producing more than 14 million tons a year. He is not a member of the Southern Coal Producers' Association, which Lewis had refused to seat in bargaining sessions until ordered by Justice Goldsborough.

Cook took exception to a statement of Representative Hartley (R., N. J.), chairman of the House Labor Committee and coauthor of the Taft-Hartley Act. Hartley was quoted yesterday as saying it was "obvious" that Lewis was planning a strike in July, when the present contract expires, and that he was not bargaining in good faith.

In reply, the operator said in a statement he did not think a strike was "contemplated or wanted."

Explains Stalemate

Cook said the stalemate was caused by "the asinine attitude" of Charles O'Neill, spokesman for the coal operators, in "freezing of the 1947 welfare fund account."

"But I am not so sure that the same operator group isn't angling for a lockout in order that they may again raise the price of coal to industry and the public straight up $1 per ton as they did after the suspension in March, when no raise in wages was involved," Cook said.

eral months, without the participation of the representatives of the employes, devised a wholly inadequate pension and insurance plan which you advise us you intend to impose on your employes and for which you will have to pay $16 to $22 per month."

In its offer Westinghouse proposed to put into effect what it described as an expanded pension and insurance program. It said the program would cost Westinghouse 4 cents an hour per employe.

Westinghouse said it estimated the cost of its offer to be an average of 12.4 cents an hour in pay and security benefits for both hourly paid and salaried employes.

Last April Westinghouse branded any "third round" of wage boosts inflationary, and pay increases could not be justified.

Kaiser-Frazer Offers 13-Cent Wage Increase

Detroit, June 11 (A.P.).—Kaiser-Frazer Corp. gave the CIO United Auto Workers their first major employe welfare plan today, along with a 13-cent hourly wage increase.

The new contract, retroactive to June 1 on approval by the union membership, covers 11,500 hourly rated and salaried employes. It sets up a company-financed health program to be administered jointly by company and union.

Kaiser-Frazer agreed to contribute 5 cents to the fund for each hour worked by each employe. The money will be used to provide sick and accident benefits, hospitalization, life insurance and other social security benefits.

The welfare program replaces a production bonus system in effect since the company began large-scale operations several years ago. This previously unique system provided a $5 contribution to an employe bonus pool for each car shipped from the factory.

The final bonus pool, with some $500,000 accumulated since last November, will be distributed to employes in August.

Kaiser-Frazer's salaried employes were given a 9 per cent raise with a guarantee of $22.50 monthly. This figure also is slightly higher than other settlements.

Some 30,000 Ford workers meanwhile went through a day of idleness because of a parts shortage. They will return to their jobs Monday, when 200,000 General Motors employes start a week-long layoff caused by a lack of steel.

Krug Approves Plan For Snake River Dam

Secretary of Interior Krug approved yesterday a plan for a $443,660,000 dam which would be the tallest and deepest in the world.

The proposed dam, in the mile-deep Snake River canyon along the Idaho-Oregon border, would be slightly taller than Hoover Dam in Nevada and Arizona, now the world's tallest, and would back up a reservoir 93 miles long.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Back To Harding?

FIVE MONTHS before the Republicans met for their convention in 1920 a political prophecy came from one of the party's shrewd political fixers. He said:

Childs

"We are not bothering about primaries and delegations. At 2 in the morning before the nomination, half a dozen men will meet in a room, go over the candidates who have been eliminated, and then and there Senator Harding will be nominated."

It happened in just that way in a smoke-filled room in Chicago's Blackstone Hotel, and that has become the prototype of all smoke-filled hotel rooms. The prophet was Harry M. Daugherty, who was to become Attorney General in the Cabinet of Warren G. Harding and go down to disgrace with the spoilsmen and corruptionists of that tragic era.

The parallels between 1920 and 1948 are too striking to be ignored. Then, too, the nation was weary in the wake of a great war. Then, too, prices were soaring and the average American had little time for politics as he struggled to pay the rent and the grocery bill.

IN 1920, as in 1948, the GOP had able men who had campaigned intensively for the Presidency. These men had impressed their views and their personalities on the public. The three leading contenders in that other June were Gen. Leonard Wood, Gov. Frank O. Lowden and Senator Hiram Johnson of California.

These three contestants were deadlocked on the first ballot. The vote was Wood 287½, Lowden 211½ and Johnson 133½. The deadlock went on for three days until half a dozen men met to agree on Harding. The compact was signed and sealed shortly after midnight and the following morning Harding was nominated.

This time, at Philadelphia, the leading contenders are Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Senator Robert A. Taft and Harold Stassen. On the first ballot Dewey's strength is estimated at 300 to 325, Taft's at 250 to 275, and Stassen's at 150 to 175.

Thus the same kind of deadlock will develop as developed 28 years ago. In Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg the party has a compromise candidate of stature and great national prestige.

But also within the party are powerful forces seeking to install in the White House another Harding. There was nothing wicked or sinister about the bland, pleasure-loving Senator from Ohio. He was merely a willing party hack, ready to be pushed around by stronger men who knew what they wanted out of the Federal Government. He had little understanding of his country or its place in the world. In the Republican stable today are dark horses on the Harding model.

THE ATMOSPHERE of 1920, as described by Karl Schriftgiesser in his just-published This Was Normalcy, was one of grab - while - the grabbing - is - good. At the Chicago convention in 1920 a swarm of favor-seekers, many of them representing great wealth, pressed down on the delegates.

Something like that atmosphere has oppressed the Republican Congress as greedy lobbyists push for the benefits they seem to feel are certain to come from the GOP. And at times Republican officialdom encourages that attitude.

In the current issue of the Republican News, official paper of the Republican National Committee, is a remarkable appeal captioned: "Don't Throw Peanuts to the Elephant." It gives a table showing tax savings under the tax cut put through the GOP Congress, with the taxpayer who earns $2500 saving $78.40, and the taxpayer who earns $50,000 saving $7533. The appeal says:

"Take a look at the table below. Many of our friends feel that, entirely apart from other important considerations, the least they can do to express their appreciation is to contribute a substantial part of their tax savings for this year to insure the reelection of the Congress which made this possible."

In the same issue, the chairman of the GOP finance committee says: "The stakes are too high to take any chance on not winning."

The stakes are certainly too high to take a chance on another Harding. Harding led the Nation back to isolationism and the short-sighted policies of the men around him prepared the way for boom and bust. The evil consequences came in a terrible depression and a more terrible war.

Succeeding columns will be devoted to an appraisal of the men and the issues at Philadelphia. The choice to be made there may well be as momentous as that which was made in the same city in 1787.

Chilean Communist Denied Entry to U. S.

Mexico City, June 11 (A.P.).—Chilean Communist Senator Salvador Ocampo has been denied admission to the United States, the United States Embassy here said today.

Ocampo, secretary of the Latin American Federation of Labor (CTAL), planned to attend the International Labor Organization meeting at San Francisco, Calif., as an observer. The embassy said if he were an official CTAL delegate or an official Chilean on business, he could enter the United States; otherwise no.

Conferees Approve School Lunches

By the United Press

Senate-House conferees yesterday voted to appropriate $75,000,000 for the Federal school lunch program in fiscal 1949.

That was the figure agreed upon in the Senate version of the Agriculture Department appropriations bill. The House had voted only $65,000,000.

The conferees also agreed to accept a Senate increase of $450,000 for the administrative expenses of the Rural Electrification Administration.

Senators Call Public Hearing On Rail Strife

By The Associated Press

A Senate Labor subcommittee decided yesterday to "get the facts" on the wage dispute between three brotherhoods and the Nation's railroads at a public hearing Tuesday.

Chairman Ball (R., Minn.) said the five-man subcommittee invited both sides to testify at that time. Besides Ball, committee members are Senators Jenner (R., Ind.), Donnell (R., Mo.), Ellender (D., La.) and Murray (D., Mont.).

"The brotherhoods came to us and said they want to tell their story," Ball said. "They contend that since the Government seized the railroads, they can't find anybody to negotiate with. We want to get the facts on the whole situation."

The Minnesota Senator said officials of the Association of American Railroads had been invited to send witnesses to the hearing. The three brotherhoods involved in the dispute are engineers, firemen and switchmen.

Hearing Slated June 22 On Court Bar to Strike

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday set June 22 for a hearing on the Government's application for a permanent injunction to bar a railroad strike while it operates the roads.

He already has signed a temporary order prohibiting a strike until the issue of a permanent order is settled. The temporary ban replaced an earlier order that would have expired last midnight.

Tuck Steps in To Prosecute In Mine Attack

Richmond, Va., June 11 (A.P.).—Governor Tuck today directed Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr., to go into the circuit court of Buchanan County and take over the criminal prosecution of 178 men charged with violating the State's anti-lynch law.

In a seldom invoked move, the governor said he was ordering prosecution by the State's top legal officer because of the apparent lack of interest by Buchanan's local law inforcement officers.

The 178 men were indicted after an assault upon R. L. Gilliam, one of the proprietors of the Gilliam and Hodgins strip-mine operation, last April in which the operator was seriously injured. This attack, the governor wrote Almond, was committed by a group of union miners bent upon stopping the non-union operation and intimidating the workers.

"Local law enforcement agencies offered no protection," Tuck said, "and but for the timely intervention of the State police more serious consequences to property and human life would have been wrought."

The wholesale arrests were made, he added, solely through the diligence of the State police at his direction. Grand jury action was taken, the Governor said, "through the prompt, fearless and dutiful action of the distinguished judge of the Buchanan Circuit Court."

Tuck said the attack on Gilliam and the damage to his property didn't represent an isolated incident but were "the culmination of a chain of unlawful acts of violence and terrorism committed with contumacy and flagrant defiance of constituted authority."

The beginning of the trials have been set tentatively for the July term, which opens July 12.

Shipowners To Test Hiring Hall Legality

New York, June 11 (A.P.).—Shipowners will test the legality of the union hiring hall before the National Labor Relations Board.

Frank J. Taylor, chairman of the steamship companies' negotiating committee, announced the move tonight while the companies and five CIO unions awaited the report of a presidential fact-finding board.

The unions have warned of a possible strike next Tueesday of their 150,000 members.

Taylor said the shipowners will file chargese of unfair labor practices with the NLRB against two of the unions, the National Maritime Union and the American Radio Association.

He said the companies would charge that the unions refused to bargain on clauses in existing contracts which shipowners believe must be changed to avoid violation of the Taft-Hartley Law.

The unions also will be charged with attempting to coerce employers to violate sections of the law which prohibit employers from discriminating against nonunion men in hiring.

The employers' committee will take the stey, Taylor said, to clear up the legal status of employment clauses in existing contracts, which require hiring through the union hiring hall.

[United Press said the fact finding board's report was delivered to the White House Friday and was expected to be made public today. —Editor's note.]

Anti-Strike Injunction Dissolved at Oak Ridge

Knoxville, Tenn., June 11 (A.P.).—Federal Judge George C. Taylor today dissolved an injunction which has prevented a walkout of some 800 workers at an atomic plant in nearby Oak Ridge.

Taylor signed an order, on the application of Government attorneys, and made it effective at once. No strike was in prospect immediately, since company and union representatives are negotiating.

The 80-day "cooling off" period which the injunction provided under Taft-Hartley Act procedure expired Monday.

Synagogue To Observe 2-Day Feast

Shevuoth, the Feast of Weeks, will be observed in Washington synagogues from sundown today through sundown Monday.

The feast follows 49 days after the second day of Passover and is celebrated on the sixth and seventh days of the Jewish month of Sivan. It was originally celebrated in Palestine as a festival of the first ripe fruit.

Today Shevuoth is primarily associated with the revelation of the Laws on Mount Sinai and is known as the "season of the giving of the law." Emphasis is placed on the need for Jews to reopen their hearts and receive the laws each year during the feast.

During Shevuoth services, the Book of Ruth is read to emphasize the universality of the Ten Commandments of Jewish Law. The feast is also a day of confirmation for Jewish boys and girls.

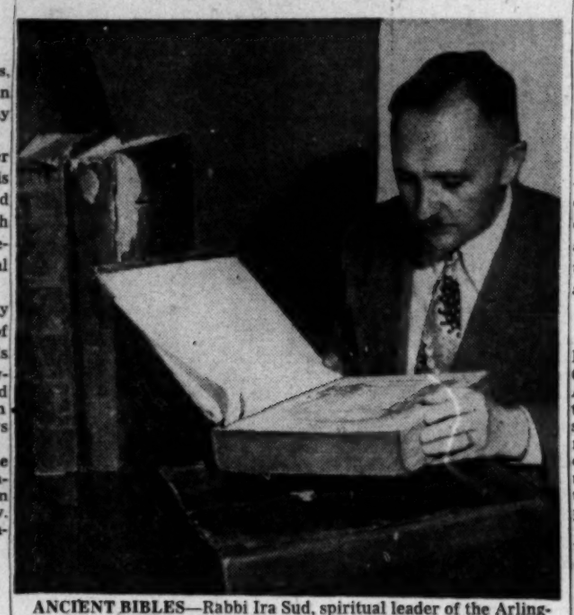
Arlington Rabbi Treasures Bibles as Memorial to Friends



ANCIENT BIBLES—Rabbi Ira Sud, spiritual leader of the Arlington Jewish Center, 2920 Lee blvd., looks over one of four volumes of the Old Testament printed in Venice, Italy, four centuries ago

Four ancient volumes, a monument to Jewish-Christian cooperation, rest in the rabbi's study at the Arlington Jewish Center, 2920 Lee blvd.

To Rabbi Ira Sud, the owner of the books, they are also a memorial to six of his friends who died at the hands of the Nazis.

The four volumes are a Hebrew edition of the Old Testament, with commentaries.

Printed in Venice, Italy, in the Jewish calendar year of 5307 (1547) the oldest of the books is the third edition of an Old Testament published by Daniel Bomberg, Christian printer of Hebrew books. Two of the books were printed in 1617, and the third in 1618, all at the same place.

Bomberg, in his day, revolutionized the printing of Rabbinical Bibles and published the first complete edition of the Talmud in 1523. Rabbi Sud explained that all such work had to have the approval of Catholic Church authorities.

Some of these church scholars, he added, knew more about Hebrew literature than many of the Jews of the day.

With this story of church cooperation of four centuries ago goes a modern tale, Rabbi Sud added.

He was one of seven young men from Prague, Czechoslovakia, who attended the Jewish Theological Seminary in Breslau, Germany. Today he is the lone survivor of that group, for he escaped to the United States just three days before the German army invaded Poland.

After the war Rabbi Sud learned that the parents of one of his friends, Rabbi Albert Schon, had survived the Nazi tortures and were living in Bano, Czechoslovakia. The father had been so severely heaten that he had lost his hearing.

To help the family, Rabbi Sud sent the old man an American hearign aid and has supplied him regularly with batteries. The family, though almost without possessions, wanted to show their American friends their gratitude.

They sent him the four ancient volumes and other old Jewish literature which a Christian friend had hidden during the occupation. Today the books occupy a place of honor in Rabbi Sud's study, a memorial to his friends who perished in the ghetto at Terrazin.

Church Groups Meet Aug. 22 In Amsterdam

The first assembly of the World Council of Churches will meet in Amsterdam, August 22-September 4. Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, has been at Geneva headquarters of the council as public relations officer since early in January. The following story was prepared by Dr. Reissig for The Washington Post.

By Dr. Frederick E. Reissig

Geneva, Switzerland, June 11.—In the formation of the World Council of Churches this coming August at Amsterdam, Holland, the growing sense of the need for greater Christian unity will find tangible expression.

Reissig

For 10 years the World Council has been in the process of formation. In 1938 at Utrecht, Holland, some 80 church leaders met to take concrete steps toward bringing such a World Council into being.

Held Up by War

The Second World War prevented the holding of the first assembly of the council in 1941 in the United States, as was first planned.

At the Amsterdam assembly nearly 140 church bodies from approximately 40 nations will be officially represented. The group includes not only the so-called Protestant churches but also the Eastern Orthodox churches. The Roman Catholic Church is not included by its own choice.

The Russian Orthodox, as represented by the Moscow Patriarch, has not yet declared whether it will be officially represented.

All churches are eligible for membership in this council which accept the basis of membership as stated in the proposed constitution and "accept our Lord Jesus Christ as God and Savior."

The largest department of the council since the close of the war has been its reconstruction and interchurch aid department. Through it the churches of the more fortunate countries have brought material relief and spiritual aid to war-stricken areas of Europe.

Studies Important

Another major function of the World Council is that carried on by the study department. For two years theologians, historians and lay men and women have been studying the theme of the assembly—"Man's Disorder and God's Design."

This study is divided into four separate subjects: the church itself; the evangelistic and missionary task of the church; the economic and social disorder of our present world, and the churches' responsibility for good will and order. The results of each of these studies will form a basis of study for the assembly.

No invitations have been sent to any governments to be represented at Amsterdam, yet world peace will be one of the major issues before the assembly.

"The churches consider that it belongs to the very nature of their mission that they should not be identified with any secular powers or policies and believe that they serve the interest of peace best when they speak exclusively in the name of the Lord of all nations." Dr. W. A. Visser 't Hooft, general secretary of the council, has declared.

Ohioan Calls 3 for Wallace Communists

Columbus, Ohio, June 11 (AP).—Secretary of State Edward J. Hummel told the Ohio Supreme Court today that three of Henry A. Wallace's principal campaigners in Ohio were Communists.

The secretary of state, who has barred the presidential candidate from the Ohio ballot, listed them as:

Nathan R. Zahm, administrative director of the Wallace-for-President Committee; Elsie Zazrivy and David I. Sindell, an attorney, all of Cleveland.

Hummel barred the Wallace ticket under a law, enacted in 1941, which was designed to keep from the ballot "parties, or groups, engaged in un-American activities."

Mrs. Zazrivy, 40, an office worker in the Wallace-for-President headquarters here, said "it's certainly amazing. I'd prefer to make no comment now."

ADA Granted Injunction

President Truman is the only candidate for President on the primary ballot, which Hildreth said would be binding on the delegates sent to Philadelphia.

Chairman Hildreth told The Washington Post that the District Committee felt the delegates from the District ought to represent District interests rather than those of national organizations.

Four candidates indorsed by the liberal, anti-Communist Americans for Democratic Action filed as candidates, posted $225 in fees and claimed they met all the requirements published by the District committee.

These candidates, who are said to favor an open convention and to incline toward nomination of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower or Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, are Tilford Dudley, assistant national director of the CIO Political Action Committee, Joseph L. Rauh, jr., Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley and Mrs. Walter Loucheim.

When the District committee refused to place the names of the four ADA candidates on the ballot for its primary, three of them went into District Court and, through Attorney Wallace M. Cohen, asked for an injunction against the primary being held without their names on the ballot.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday granted them a restraining order, blocking the primary but set a hearing for Monday morning at 10 o'clock. A quick disposition favoring the District committee would enable the primary to go off as scheduled.

Indianapolis, June 11 (AP).—United States Senator William E. Jenner of Bedford lost his bid for the gubernatorial nomination at the State Republican Convention tonight.

A coalition of anti-Jenner forces gave the victory to Hobart Creighton of Warsaw, speaker of the Indiana House of Representatives, on the second ballot. The vote was: Creighton, 931; Jenner, 885.

On the first ballot Jenner had led, and Creighton was second. But two other candidates who trailed—A. V. Burch of Evansville, State auditor, and Walter Helmke, Fort Wayne lawyer—asked that their support be switched to Creighton, and the anti-Jenner forces put him over.

The convention was the first under a new law requiring that delegates vote secretly on voting machines.

During the 10-hour session the convention also nominated candidates for 10 other State offices besides Governor, adopted the 1948 party platform and heard the keynote speech of Representative Charles A. Halleck, GOP floor leader of the United States House of Representatives.

Halleck challenged President Truman to ask the Democratic National Convention to include repeal of the Taft-Hartley law in its platform.

The State convention indorsed Halleck as Indiana's favorite-son candidate for President. However, this does not bind the 22 delegates chosen in congressional district caucuses last night, and the 11 Delegates-at-large named by the convention today.

Creighton is one of the world's largest poultry producers and has been in Indiana politics for 16 years. He was aviation cadet in World War I.

His Democratic opponent will be chosen next Tuesday.

Contest Wide Open

3938 Quito Ballots Thrown Out

Quito, Ecuador, June 11 (U.P.).—The supreme electoral tribunal today voided 3938 ballots cast in five Quito precincts during Sunday's presidential election.

The action left the outcome of the contest wide open. Most of the voided ballots were for Galo Plaza, who was leading by 3987 votes.

Plaza, 42-year-old former Ambassador to the United States, was nominated by the Independent National Democratic movement.

An authoritative political observer commented that "if so many voting irregularities were found by the tribunal to have been committed in Quito, it is likely that a checkup of the returns from the interior may produce many surprises."

Simultaneously, the Liberal Party formally petitioned the tribunal that the entire election be voided. It claimed registration certificates used Sunday were issued for the 1946 municipal elections and were valid only for that contest.

Duff Says He'll Control Pennsylvania Delegates

Harrisburg, Pa., June 11 (AP).—Gov. James H. Duff was quoted today as saying that if anyone attempts to take control of Pennsylvania's 73-man delegation to the Republican National Convention, "I will fight to the limit."

Duff was quoted in a front-page article in the Philadelphia Inquirer. The story was written by John Cummings, political reporter and columnist.

But yesterday, at a news conference, the Pennsylvania executive told reporters: "I don't know anything about a fight over delegates."

The Inquirer story said Duff was asked to comment on reports that G. Mason Owlett, Pennsylvania national committeeman, is supporting Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York for the GOP nomination.

"I was never for him (Dewey) for President, and I am not for him now," the Inquirer quoted Duff as saying.

every point since Teheran," he said, with the result "Russia, crusading for the theory of communism, now is placed in a strategic position."

"No one knows what is going on in the Russian mind," he said in taking up the draft and UMT, "so we are forced to establish armed protection to meet any attack.

"My fingers are always a little crossed on military advice."

Military leaders have spent a great deal of money to promote universal military training, "but meanwhile, there has been no real integration of the three armed services," he added.

"The Army," he declared, "has been so obsessed with UMT that it has not made an effort in good faith to get men through voluntary appeal."

He said although he voted for the draft, "I hope it may never be necessary to renew the draft."

Pilot Falls From Plane, Beginner Brings It Down

By The Associated Press

"There I was, flat on my back, at 10,000 feet"—so starts the standard tall tale of the airman.

But Navy Lieut. (j.g.) Gerald H. Wilson of the Milton (Fla.) Naval Air Station would have to add sheepishly at that point: "And then I fell out."

The Navy told the story of the accident yesterday. Wilson was flying over the Florida station showing Aristedes A. Mascarenhas, student pilot of the Brazilian air force, what to do in case of an upside-down spin.

About the time his advice was most needed, Wilson accidentally hit his safety-belt catch. He promptly fell out, but his parachute worked.

Mascarenhas, whose United States Navy flight time was only 17 hours, got the plane out of a difficult inverted spin and brought it down undamaged in a practice field. Wilson suffered only minor abrasions.

thorizes a Federal appropriation of 10 million dollars to provide housing for victims of the flood.

Later the measure arrived and he signed it.

"We are trying to get a resolution to authorize the Department of Agriculture to make grants to those farmers who have had their livestock washed away and whose stock had to be moved from farms to other places. I hope that can be arranged immediately."

Later the President went into a conference with Federal, State and Red Cross officials at the auditorium.

Mr. Truman took off in the Independence this morning from McChord Field, 20 miles outside of Olympia. The old Sacred Cow, carrying Secret Service agents, followed the Independence and then came the Northwest Airline planes with reporters and photographers.

A heavy rain spoiled visibility and Mr. Truman was unable to see the havoc below. Somewhate later, however, the rain let up, and the reporters traveling in a slower plane had a clear view of the devastation.

City Gone Literally

Vanport City, which had a population of 18,000, was gone literally. Back waters of the Columbia engulfed it completely. All that could be seen were rooftops.

Vanport—the name is made up of the first two syllables of Vancouver and Portland—was built during the war to house workers in the Henry Kaiser shipyards.

After delivering his talk in Portland, President Truman drove to the outskirts to view the pathetic spectacle that once was Vanport.

Riding with Mr. Truman were three officials drawn from Washington, D. C., by the flood: J. A. Krug, Secretary of the Interior; Raymond H. Foley, Housing and Home Finance Administrator, and Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator.

A good-sized crowd lined the streets of Portland as Mr. Truman drove through. Flags were flying, too, but it turned out they were for tomorrow's Portland Rose Festival.

From Portland the Chief Executive drove to Brooklyn, three miles away, where he boarded his 15-car special train. The First Lady and Margaret were already aboard, having passed up the flight.

The train is scheduled to arrive at Berkeley, Calif., shortly after noon Saturday. The President's foreign policy speech at the University of California is scheduled for 4:08 Pacific Daylight Time, which means 7:08 p. m. in Washington, D. C.

Late this afternoon, speaking from the rear platform of his train as it halted in Salem, he called for a flood-control program and predicted a battle ahead.

Must Fight for Others

Mr Truman told a crowd of about 3000, "We had to fight to get Grand Coulee and Bonneville and we will have to fight to get the rest of the dams to produce all of the Columbia's power."

Mr. Truman has been in an amiable mood as he has faced crowds from the rear platform of his 15-car train this afternoon.

At Albany, Oreg., a shrill-voiced woman yelled, "We're close enough to see your dimples."

Wrinkles, at 64

"They're not dimples," Mr. Truman shot back, grinning: "They're wrinkles, you can't have dimples at 64."

At Salem, Oreg., he said he knew that the people were out to see the Chief Executive of the greatest Nation in the world, not Harry S. Truman.

"You know," he said, "you have to bear that in mind when you're President, or you'll get a bad case of Potomac fever and then you are ruined. Woodrow Wilson said that a great many men come to Washington and grow up with their jobs and a very large number come and just swell up."

At Salem he told about earlier trips to the West Coast. Nobody paid any attention to him then, he said, grinning.

"Of course," he added, "I understand the only reason they pay so much attention to me now is because I own the greatest office of the world."

And you are a Democrat," a man yelled.

He said that he wanted this to be the most prosperous and the greatest country in the world.

"No President can do that by himself," he said.

Truman Raps Congress In Wire to Musicians

Asbury Park, N. J., June 11 (AP).—President Truman wired the American Federation of Musicians today that "unwise legislation enacted by Congress and its failure to enact wise legislation join to imperil the future of America."

The President's telegram from Olympia, Wash., to the fifty-first annual convention of the AFL union was read to the delegates. They greeted it with an ovation.

Mr. Truman said this Nation has gone forward—not backward—for 15 years and all Americans have shared in the growth and development of its economy and resources.

The President added:

"Recently this pattern has been challenged by a Congress which has enacted class legislation to benefit favored groups, a Congress which favors increasing prices and profits, but is indifferent to the problems of the small wage owner."

Boys Clubs to Benefit From Children's Dances

Children's dance recitals for the benefit of the Prince Georges County Boys' Clubs will be held tonight and Sunday at the Cheverly-Tuxedo Elementary School.

The recitals will be the annual revue of the Mercedes B. Frazier School of Dance. Tonight's performance will begin at 8 o'clock and Sunday's at 2:30 p. m. Admission will be $1 which will go to the boys' clubs' drive, scheduled to conclude this weekend.

Folsom Loses Round In Suit Over Paternity

Cullman, Ala., June 11 (AP).—A red-haired divorcee won today the first round in her paternity suit against Gov. James E. Folsom. A circuit judge refused to dismiss the case on legal grounds.

The suits, filed by 30-year-old Mrs. Christine Putman Johnston last March, ask that the court declare Folsom her common-law husband and the father of her son, James Douglas, 2.

Houtteman Finally Wins One, Beating Nats, 7-6

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, June 11.—Confidentially, Tony Zale did say two days before the Graziano fight that "this guy has no business with my title and I've licked better fighters." He resented the whole idea that a fellow who couldn't box was the defending champion and wearing the crown that used to belong to himself.

POVICH

He knew Graziano could hit—that was not to be taken away from The Rock. Graziano had caught up with a wilting 33-year-old Zale in the furnace heat of a Chicago indoor arena only a year before and battered him into a fumbling pulp to take the title away, and a year before that he had dumped Zale on the floor in the Yankee Stadium ring. Sure, the guy could hit, but Zale could hit, too, and he knew how to box and Graziano didn't.

That's why it was startling to see Rocky abandon his wild swinging in the first round, and go into a boxing pose, with left hands to the face and everything. It was Rocky trying to get fancy and act the part of a polisned champion, and because he didn't quite know how, that was his big mistake, aside from entering the ring in the first place. It was while Graziano was trying to box that Sharpshooter Zale reached him with the long left hand that dumped him on the floor in that first round for a two-count.

FROM GRAZIANO'S DRESSING room after the fight came the report that Rocky was not the same after that first-round knockdown—that he was numbed and never did recover, but that is a tired old wheeze that is written about many fighters. The Graziano of the second round was the same old Rocky, right-hand crazy, abandoning his fancy stuff and swarming over Zale and hurting him with a furious follow-up after one hard right landed.

At that point, it looked like the Chicago script all over again, with Rocky coming off the floor to belt Zale out, and Zale was in bad shape indeed just before the bell. He was hurt and reeling on the ropes, resorting to rolling the head in desperation, and defenseless otherwise except for the old instinct to keep that head moving and hope that Graziano would miss. And Tony was thrice blessed when the excited Rocky did miss with three wild swings before the bell took Zale out of trouble.

But this was Newark on a cool, chill evening, not an indoor arena in hot Chicago with the fierce heat of the ring lights playing murderously on a tired, hurt old man of the prize ring. Through the minute's rest on his corner stool, Zale drank eagerly of the cool breezes, and they restored him, and he could bound back to the battle, vibrant again and ready to box or punch as the occasion invited.

THE FIGHT ended conclusively enough with Graziano on the flat of his back, unconscious at the count of 10 by Referee Paul Cavalier who could have computed his income tax for all the heed Rocky could pay. But it could have been a different ending, if Cavalier had not messed it up a bit just before the decisive knockout punch.

Half dead, but dead game, Rocky did get up at the count of seven from the knockdown that preceded the final left hook that stretched him out for keeps. But on arising he was in no condition to continue. As Cavalier moved toward the reeling Rocky for the perfunctory duty of brushing the resin from the fallen fighter's gloves, Graziano started a ludicrous sag to the floor whereupon the referee stepped into the role of one of Rocky's handlers. Actually he held Graziano up under the pretense of brushing off the gloves against his shirt.

The promoters doubtless liked Cavalier's actions. It made for a slightly longer fight, and the customers got what they wanted—a clean knockout instead of the dreary spectacle of Rocky going down without being rendered the final coup de grace. But Zale's people were entitled to yelp at the reprieve Graziano got against their man from a referee who was too customer-conscious.

IT DIDN'T MAKE ANY difference, though. Zale eliminated any chance of a rhubarb with his next clean shot at Rocky's chin. When Cavalier did turn Graziano loose it was merely to meet the continued fury of Zale. That sledge-hammer left made a little rock out of the big Rock of the second round. Nobody was more thoroughly knocked out than Graziano was.

As predicted, it started and finished as a Pier Six brawl. Prize fighting went back to the primitive. The battle was more becoming to a barge in the old fugitive days of fighting. And the setting helped. Ruppert Stadium, in contrast to the big New York ball parks, was a cozy place for the battle. The $5 seats were as good as the $40 seats in the big parks. The intimacy of the customers and the battling was wonderful. The whole fight business got a lift.

They'll fight again, no doubt. But not this year, maybe not next. It will be time enough for a fourth Zale-Graziano meeting when they can't make any money fighting other guys. Then they'll draw again on their wonderfully negotiable presence in the ring against each other. They know that's ready money, whenever they're ready.

Tough Luck

Joe Ezar (right), of Orlando, Fla., discovered yesterday at the National Open golf tourney at Los Angles that he shouldn't have "stood in bed." Ezar is telling his sympathetic townsman, Denny Champagne, how the committee disqualified him for being all of one minute late after he overslept. He has a beef—Thursday his trio had to tee off an hour behind schedule and didn't finish until 8:30 p. m.

Fireman Feller Stems Yanks For Tribe, 10-8

New York, June 11 (AP).—Bobby Feller came from the bullpen to help stop a ninth-inning New York Yankee uprising as Cleveland clubbed the World Champions tonight, 10-8, to protect their three-game American League lead.

A crowd of 67,924 saw the Yanks drop into third place.

Harry Gilmer Comes to Town

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

LIKE SOMETHING very rare and precious, Harry Gilmer was officially unveiled by the Washington Redskins yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

The All-America passer from Alabama obligingly struck 50-odd poses for the cameras, said just the right things to reporters and gave autographs until his arm was sore.

The general opinion: If Harry handles Sammy Baugh's quarterback job as well as he handles the press he's the answer to Redskin prayers.

Watching proceedings, a veteran Redskin fan immediately compared Gilmer's introduction—both to the 'Skins and their T formation—with Baugh's.

"BAUGH SHOWED up all alone at the Redskins 'training grounds' at Fairlawn in 1937. He climbed out of a cab, took off his coat and started throwing footballs before anybody recognized him."

"Maybe they're putting the pressure on Gilmer with all this picture-taking. But at least he's being recognized."

A few of the Nats, in spotless uniforms, casually dropped around (by arrangement of Redskin General Manager Dick McCann) and there was a brief overlap of the baseball and football seasons. The Nats handled footballs almost as well as the other Redskins present—Coaches Turk Edwards, Wayne Millner and Wilbur Moore, Center Al DeMao, End Joe Tereshinski.

Redskin players and coaches weren't going all out about Gilmer, a difficult thing for anybody after working with the master, Baugh. But Edwards was hopeful.

"He's learning things," he said. "I think he'll do."

Joe Tereshinski, who played against Gilmer as a University of Georgia star, started off with high praise:

"He was almost the whole team when Alabama beat us 28-14. But we stopped him cold in '46, won 14-0."

Gilmer himself was as humble as Baugh's latest understudy should be.

"I've got an awful lot of work to do," he admitted, "an awful lot of work . . ."

Braves Beat Cards, 7 to 3, Take Over Lead

St. Louis, June 11 (AP).—The rampant Boston Braves swept their three-game series with the St. Louis Cardinals, by winning tonight, 7 to 3, and took over undisputed possession of first place in the National League.

It was the Braves' sixth straight victory, and the fifth consecutive game in which a Red bird pitcher failed to go the route.

For six innings it appeared that the Braves had retired from the warpath. Al Brazle checked them with one run and rang up seven strikeouts. But they ganged up on the tall southpaw for three runs in the seventh, with a two-run single by Mike McCormick doing the most damage.

Fonder Takes Feature Race On Midget Card

George Fonder, leading midget auto race winner at West Lanham Speedway the past two years, snapped his slump with a hard-fought victory over Tony Bonadies in the 25-lap feature last night, his first of the local season.

Fondér, Lansdale, Pa., driver, staved off repeated bids by Bonadies to hold the lead he grabbed at the outset and he came home in 5 minutes, 55.61 seconds, before 7100 enthusiastic customers.

Dee Thoran, Los Angeles, took the third spot and Charley Miller, Linden, N. J., finished fourth.

Jack George Still Doing It

Jack George's homer gave Eastman Kodak a 4-3 victory over Falls Church yesterday in an East Recreation League game on the Ellipse.

Eastman, runner-up in the first half, now has a win and a tie in second-half play. Jack Calaghan and Bud Wickers divided the pitching chore for the winners.

Washington Tennis Team Wins at Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., June 11 (AP).—Washington triumphed today in the Hotchkiss net meet at the Norfolk Yacht and Country Club and will meet Baltimore tomorrow at 2:30 o'clock for the cup.

Washington took the measure of Norfolk in convincing fashion, yielding only one match to Norfolk, while winning, 8-1. In that duel, Howson Cole outlasted Rickey Willies, 8-6, 6-0.

His Single In 10th Ends String of Eight Losses

By Morris Siegel,
Post Reporter

Art Houtteman, the losingest pitcher in the major leagues this year, batted himself to his first victory of the season last night, singling home the winning run in the tenth inning as the Detroit Tigers beat the Nats, 7-6.

Houtteman's single off Mark Christman's glove drove in Pat Mullin, who had opened the inning with a 408-foot triple. The infield hit put an end to Houtteman's personal losing streak of eight in a row.

It was a bitter defeat for the Nats and 16,121 customers. The defeat interrupted Washington's four-game winning streak and moved the Tigers only one-half game back of the fourth-place Nats.

Houtteman was the last of five Detroit pitchers and the seventeenth man the Bengals tossed into the fray, which was all Washington's going into the seventh inning.

A 6-2 Lead Wiped Out

The Tigers entered the seventh trailing, 6-2, but they came out of it with four runs to tie up a game that appeared headed for the records as Walter Masterson's sixth success and his second in a row over the Detroiters.

Successive singles by Eddie Mayo, Vic Wertz and Eddie Lipon drove in the first Tiger run.

Masterson then walked Eddie Lake to load the bases and bring Lefthander Forrest Thompson to the scene.

Thompson's first pitch was a single to Georgie Kell, his third of four hits, and three runs romped in as Junior Wooten threw wildly to third base trying to nab Lake.

"Hoot" Takes Charge

Lake came home with the tieing run and that's the way it remained until Houtteman took personal charge of the situation in the tenth.

Stubby Overmire, the Tigers starter, lasted three innings, retiring with the Nats leading 4-0. Detroit rustled up a couple of runs in the fourth off Masterson but the Nats made it 5-2 in the fifth as the first of Al Benton's five walks proved costly.

Benton walked himself out of the ball game and the sixth Nat run in the sixth when he issued four more passes, three in a row, to force in a score.

Houtteman entered the picture in the seventh when Southpaw Bill Pierce walked Christman after fanning Wooten. Al Evans slammed his first pitch into a double play.

The Nats got a runner to third in the eighth with two away, but he died there and Kell swatted the tenth of Detroit's 12 hits, a double with two away in the ninth, and he remained on second.

Mullin welcomed Milo Candini with a booming triple to start the tenth, the ball hitting the top of the wall in center. Candini bore down and forced Vico to pop to Christman and got Wagner on a hopper to Vernon with no advance.

Then Houtteman swung for himself, sending a sizzler which Christman couldn't quite stab.

The Nats raised a good threat in their half of the tenth, but it ended suddenly. Christman singled and Evans sacrificed him to second. Jake Early, batting for Candini, got the fat part of his bat on the ball and smashed a liner right into the hands of Eddie Lake who flipped to Lipon to double Christman and that was that.

IN SHORT . . . Hal Newhouser, who's won his last five games, opposes Ray Scarborough in today's 3 o'clock ladies' day affair. . . . When Umpire Bill Grieve called Gil Coan out at first in the eighth, he also brought out Manager Joe Kuhel and a flock of Nats in protest . . . From the press box it appeared Grieve had at first signaled Coan safe . . . Second Baseman Lake fumbled Coan's grounder momentarily and Sullivan, on third, was already across with what would have been the tie-breaking run . . . Christman made a gem of a play on Vico's grounder in the seventh, racing in and to his right to field the slow bounder and toss the Tiger first baseman out by two steps.

Snead Shoots Record 138 to Lead in Open

Los Angeles, June 11 (AP).—Slammin' Sammy Snead held firm while Ben Hogan and defending Champion Lew Worsham in the second round of the United States open championship today.

Snead the slammer from West Virginia, sat on top of the heap at the midway mark with aone-stroke margin.

Snead shot his second successive sub-par 69 for a 36-hole total of 138. He broke a tournament record that had been thrice tied but never shattered in 32 years.

As for the two first day pace setters—

Hogan had a 72 for 139, and Worsham a 74 for 141, both achieved as a gallery estimated at 10,000 roared and groaned for the men who yesterday led the field with sparkling 67's.

Snead, again knifing par 71 of the long Riviera Country Club course, broke the tournament record of 139 for the first 36 holes. Evans established the record in 1916. Snead tied it in 1939 and Dick Metz and Chick Harbert equaled it in 1947.

SNEAD'S CARD

Snead, out	543	433	434	—33
Snead, in	454	435	344	—36	—33	—69

Snead, who twice barely missed this big crown of golf, goes into tomorrow's 36-hole final rounds one stroke ahead of Hogan and Bobby Locke of South Africa, whose 69 today kept him perilously close to the pace.

Listed at 140, after a 699, was Jim Turnesa of Elmsford, N. Y., and grouped in the 141 bracket were five players.

They were Jimmy Demaret, 70; George Schneiter, 68; British Amateur Champion Frank Stranahan of Toledo, 69; Worsham and Charles Congdon of Tacoma, Wash., 70.

Players who had 36-hole totals of 148 or better qualified for tomorrow's round.

Victims of the big push included six former winners of the title—Evans, Tony Manero, Craig Wood, Olin Dutra, Gene Sarazen, and Lawson Little.

The tale today was not Snead's steadiness in the clutch or the 30-foot putt he banged in on the third hole. It was Hogan's lapse of luck and Worsham's fearful two-over par performance on the tenth.

Already one over at the turn, Worsham drove into the rough on the 315-yard tenth. He lofted one back, too far. Then he flubbed two strokes in a row, and was lucky to get down in six.

He played par golf the rest of the way, but never had a chance to putt for a birdie.

Hogan sank a 35-footer on the second green to get off to a good start, but he was over the green on the seventh and three-putted the eighth. He canned a 10-footer on No. 13 but couldn't recoup further.

Low amateur was Stranahan, whose 141 was two shots ahead of Johnny Dawson of Hollywood and four in front of the Oklahoma Amateur Champion, Ken Rogers.

After yesterday's 69, Rogers faded to a 76 today.

Emotionally Low Rocky 'Lifted' by $120,000 Check

By Whitney Martin

NEW YORK, June 11 (AP).—Rocky Graziano applied a $120,000 poultice to his physical and spiritual injuries today, but Tony Zale, his conqueror, was around and listening to a rosy, if somewhat hazy, future planned for the new middleweight champion by his comanagers.

Graziano, knocked out in the third round of their Newark battle last night, was examined by his personal physician today and the medico said the Rock was emotionally depressed but physically fit. He found no evidence of a concussion.

The gross gate was announced today as $406,100.10 with a net of $302,772.65, including motion picture and radio rights. Graziano's share was a flat payment of $120,000 while Zale, restored to the division throne, was paid an even $60,000.

Zale's managers, Art Winch and Sam Pian, said nothing was definite about the plans for their fighter except that he would leave tomorrow night for his home in Gary, Ind.

WINCH SAID TONY'S first title defense would be for the Tournament of Champions, the organization which put on last night's show, and that it probably would be in September.

They were noncommittal as to the possible September opponent. It generally was believed that either Marcel Cerdan, the French veteran, or Welterweight Champion Sugar Ray Robinson would be picked.

Zale himself says he is unconcerned as to the identity of the challenger. Unmarked and as chipper as if last night's stirring brawl was only a gymnasium workout, Zale could not hide his elation in regaining the crown he lost to Graziano by a six-round knockout in Chicago last July.

When Irving Cohen and Jack Healy, Graziano's managers, arrived at the promoters' office to pick up The Rock's check, they said their fighter would take a month's rest.

"After that we want to keep him busy," said Cohen. "I'd like to have him fight 10 times a year. We'll just have to fight our way back up there."

Zale said after his victory last night that he would fight Rocky again any time, but Winch and Pian seem to have dropped him from their plans.

Coaltown, 7 Others Are Entered

By John Chandler

New York, June 11 (AP).—Citation and Coaltown, Calumet Farm's Kentucky Derby one-two punch, were entered today along with seven other colts for tomorrow's $100,000-added Belmont Stakes, third gem in racing's triple crown.

But most everyone thinks the Jones boys, General Manager Ben and his son, Jimmy, the Calumet trainer, are only fooling about Coaltown going postward tomorrow in the mile and one half test.

They don't anticipate any trouble for Citation, the way he's been mopping up the 3-year-old crop.

Seven other interests named their aces for the eightieth running of the race. However, the rumor that Coaltown would go slowed the others up a bit.

When the entry box closed the Calumets were joined by W. L. Brann's Escadru, Glen Riddle Farms' Faraway, Belair Stud's Golden Light, C. V. Whitney's Vulcan's Forge, William Helis' Salmagundi, King Ranch's Better Self and A. J. Sackett's Gasparilla. The latter two, both trained by Max Hirsch, will run as an entry.

Jimmy Jones said there was a "fifty-fifty" chance that Coaltown would accompany Citation to the post at 4:45 p. m. (EDT), and he said Hedley Woodhouse probably would get the mount if Coaltown starts.

"We won't make any final decisions until just before the race," Jones said.

Observers attempting to translate the Calumet strategy saw two possible reasons:

1. Coaltown was just "insurance," in the remote case anything should happen to Citation before post time.

2. Coaltown's presence might induce some of the others to scratch their horse, thus making it easier for Citation.

Coaltown hasn't started since May 29 when he ran second to Vulcan's Forge in the Withers Mile. The only other time Coaltown was beaten was in the Derby, where he picked up second money back of Citation.

Citation has beaten all of them this spring with the exception of Salmagundi and Golden Light, who haven't hooked up with him as 3-year-olds. Golden Light, William Woodward's surprise entry, never has tackled Citation. Salmagundi was beaten as a 2-year-old.

$78,000 For Winner

With nine starters, the Belmont purse would net the winner $78,700. Citation has won $467,000 in his two seasons of racing, and a Belmont triumph would spiral his earnings well past the half million mark.

Horses taking second, third and fourth place get $20,000, $10,000 and $5000 respectively.

The Calumet entry was listed in the early odds at 1 to 10, and Belmont officials announced they would wait until before the race tomorrow to determine whether there would be anything but "win" betting allowed.

If Citation wins the Belmont, he'll be the eighth horse to achieve the coveted triple crown, and the second from the Calumet barn of Warren Wright, Chicago and Lexington, Ky., baking powder man. Whirlaway was the first, in 1941.

The Lineup:

Horse	Jockey	Odds

Mrs. Cohen Runnerup

Kenwood's Mrs. Fillius Wins Women's Class B Golf Title

Mrs. M. W. Fillius of Kenwood won the Class B. WMAL Cup against a large field yesterday at Prince Georges Golf and Country Club.

Because she had played so well in winning the guest prize at the Indian Spring Ladies Day Tournament Thursday, Mrs. Fillius had two strokes cut off her handicap before yesterday's tournament.

Despite this, the pretty Kenwood golfer shot the low gross score of the day, 95, which with her new handicap of 18, gave her the title.

Mrs. Cohen Advances

Two strokes behind Mrs. Fillius was Mrs. Albert Cohen of Woodmont with 106-27—79. Mrs. Cohen was playing in her first Class B tournament, having been promoted from Class C Thursday.

The low gross prize was split between Mrs. R. Hayman of Indian Spring, Mrs. J. Y. Lichtenwalner of Army-Navy and Mrs. R. D. Young of Washington.

Mrs. Young chose to take the third low net prize with her 100, 20-80, so Mrs. Lichtenwalner and Mrs. Hayman will play off for the low gross trophy at a future date.

Mrs. Smith Fourth

Fourth low net went to Mrs. Estelle Smith of Prince Georges, 106, 26-80; Mrs. E. X. Murphy of Washington took fifth with 101, 21-80 and Mrs. George Freeman of Prince Georges was sixth with 105, 24-81. Mrs. Smith was playing in her first competitive test.

Mrs. Gene Olmi of Belle Haven was seventh with 109, 27-82 and the eighth and final prize went to Mrs. Walter Densmore of Belle Haven, 103, 20-83.

Mrs. William Werber, Columbia, 106, 23-93; Mrs. R. H. Rife of Washington, 110, 27-83, and Mrs. William A. Walsh, Washington, 104, 21-83 were matched out of the eighth-place prize.

Clem McCarthy will be the announcer for the exclusive description of the Belmont Stakes race this afternoon on radio station WTOP, 1500 on the dial. Bill Corum will supply the color commentary for the broadcast which begins at 4:30 p. m. EDT.

Mrs. Blair Heroine

U. S. Girls Lead in Wightman But British Break Monopoly

London, June 11 (AP).—America's tennis girls took a 2-1 lead at the outset of the Wightman Cup matches at Wimbledon today, but a young scrapper named Mrs. Molly Blair brought great cheer to British hearts.

Molly, never divesting herself of a red sweater, played a terrific doubles game, as she and Mrs. Jean Bostock trimmed Doris Hart of Miami and Mrs. Pat Canning Todd of La Jolla, Calif., the present Wimbledon champions, 6—3, 6—4, in the day's concluding match.

It was the first victory for the British girls since 1939, the last year the matches were played before the war, and when Molly slugged away the deciding point the crowd of 4000 stood almost unbelieving and cheered for many minutes.

Prior to Molly's personal triumph in the doubles, Mrs. Margaret Osborn duPont of Wilmington, Del., had beaten Mrs. Bostock, 6—4, 8—6, and Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., the present American champion, had routed Mrs. Betty Hilton, 6—1, 6—1. So the gallery on the No. 1 court was resigned to more of the same when the doubles began.

Three singles and a doubles match will wind it up tomorrow.

Syracuse Team Wins Local Golf

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Walter E. Gallagher and T. W. Higgins of Syracuse, N. Y., teamed to win the Congressional Country Club's first annual member-guest golf tournament in yesterday's final round of match play.

Gallagher and Higgins defeated Dr. W. J. Evans of the host club and his partner, Bill Briggs of Kenwood, 1 up.

Trailing two down, on the seventeenth, Briggs almost holed out his second shot for an eagle deuce, but settled for a birdie three to cut the margin to one hole.

However, the teams halved the eighteenth to give Gallagher and his New York partner the triumph.

Gallagher and Higgins had taken a quick three-up lead at the end of four holes, but some erratic play followed and the Briggs-Evans two some gradually overcome this lead on the eighth and moved one up at the turn.

Gallagher evened it on the tenth with a par four and he and his partner steadied and held a two-up lead going into seventeen. Then came Briggs' fine effort on the 337-yard seventeenth before the match ended on No. 98.

Both sides seemed to feel the tension of the final round and play was for the most part not up to the standard of the earlier rounds.

Real Brush Men Didn't Bristle

By Richard L. Coe

IN CASE YOU'VE BEEN wondering what the Fuller Brush men think of Red Skelton as "The Fuller Brush Man," be at ease.

Winston Gastman, who is manager of the Washington area division, thinks Red's a lot of fun even though his experiences in the movie "bear no resemblance to the real thing."

In a sense, it's a good thing they don't, because otherwise Gastmann's 70-odd dealers in his territory would sell precious few brushes. They'd spend their time getting involved in murder and a crooked deal worked out by a sanitation commissioner.

This would be rough on some of the busier folk who work part time with the Fuller people. We've discovered that of some 50 brush dealers in the metropolitan area, some are Government employes who try to stretch their earnings after hours and some others are students who are working their way through college. The rest are 5 to 20 year men who are buying their own homes and are what the Board of Trade terms "substantial citizens." They couldn't do that on Red's F.B.M. experiences.

Red, natch, has few of the abilities that make for the successful salesman. He messes up every customer he comes across, but in the end manages what few of the true F. B. M. ever have pulled off: he uncovers a crime setup and has a rip-roaring time doing it. He also comes off better in the laugh line than he has in his more recent pictures.

Aiding him is Janet Blair, who believes in him. Tripping him up is Don McGuire, who is, one trusts, less aware of the old team spirit than his real-life contemporaries. Don, the fiend, sets him loose on a "poisonous block" and is so obtuse he doesn't know you can twst a plastic handle into a murder weapon. This, presumably, is an imaginary trade secret which one trusts will be kept locked in the hearts of those who go to watch Red's comicalities. If this sort of thing gets out, every spate of mayhem will point to a Fuller Brush Man, and we can't have that.

A Slap-Happy Chase

The fun of "The Fuller Brush Man" is refreshing if obvious because it goes back to the knock-about clown the movies have been passing up of late. The final chase is in a warehouse stored with Army and Navy equipment and you can imagine what happens to airfilled life rafts, flare rockets and barracks, drab, prefabricated. It's a harum-scarum chase, this one, and you don't have to be a Skelton fan to enjoy it.

More about "The Fuller Brush Man" you shouldn't have to be told. Skelton is known to you and, from his office in the Press Building where it's been since the building opened, Manager Gastmann gives the comedy his laughing approval. And why shouldn't he? This sort of thing could start a trend: "The Carter Ink Man," "The United States Steel Man" and Drew Pearson as "The Lee Hat Man."

The Warner's top short is the "March of Time" report on the fight racket. Time more than subtly suggests the game is now a racket, substantiation of which we leave to Shirley Povich. But it's a good, engrossing short.

THE ZALE-GRAZIANO fight pictures have arrived at Keith's and, since the fight only went three rounds, they don't take long . . . However, if you're bent on catching them from the start of Tony's bout, they go on today at 12:45, 2:50, 5, 7:20, 9:35 and 11:55 p. m.

SPEAKING OF FIGHTS, Connie B. Gay has gotten over his with that gattling guitarist, as reported in yesterday's paper, and his show, "Gay Time," goes on as scheduled in Constitution Hall tonight at 8 . . . Tonight's hillbilly team includes Texas Jim Robertson, Clyde Moody, Pete Cassell and Hank Penny.

WEEK-ENDINGS: The Naylor of the KB chain begins adding daily matinees to its programs beginning Sunday. Doors will open daily at 12:45, with the show starting at 1 . . . Ina May Hutton, the band leader gal who changes her costume with every tempo, opens the Chesapeake Beach Park tonight at 9 . . . "Henry V" holds over at the Pix . . . Aside to V. Connell: It's not a brushoff. The Old Vic scenes which form "Our Mr. Shakespeare" were favorably reviewed when they played in their original short version.

UNHAND ME, BEAST: June Haver doesn't seem very happy in Robert Karnes' arms and Lon McCallister looks a trifle slight to do much about it. But he does. Their trouble occurs during "Scudda Hoo! Scudda Hay!" and a snappy pair of mules on the Capitol screen

PICTURES about mules come along as rarely as little mules come to big mules. "Usually reliable sources" differ on how often, if ever, the latter phenomenon comes to pass. But a picture about mules—and people—has come to the Capitol, "Scudda Hoo! Scudda Hay!," and, as mule pictures go, this is a superior one.

Mules, as a matter of fact, could hardly be in better hands than Twentiesth Century-Fox, which has filmed George Agnew Chamberlain's story, and Lon McCallister, who plays their best friend just as endearingly as he previously has befriended, in handsome Technicolor, dogs and horses.

No studio anywhere approaches the bucolic life with the lush appreciation of Spyros Skouras' sprawling film company. Twentieth has saluted the animal kingdom lavishly; only two weeks ago it praised the trotting horse on the same screen in 'Green Grass of Wyoming." It hasn't spared a dime or a ten-thousand dollar bill in giving the mule its (an authentic neuter possessive!) due and "Scudda Hoo! Sudda Hay!" is an eye picture of the country-side and its creatures.

That ideal of all screen farm boys, Lon McCallister, is a natural as the youngster who takes a handsome mule team under his care. He puts up with all the human emotions he has had to defeat in his previous championships of animal rights—a cruel stepmother, a greedy neighbor, the inexorable law, the love light of a pretty blonde's eyes (June Haver's) and the rascality of a good-fer-nuttin' young man, Robert Karnes.

Helping Lon is a character Author Chamberlain must have conceived for Walter Brennan, a wise, helpful oldster whose only weakness is the bottle, just as it was Charles Coburn's downfall in "Green Grass." Their adventures come out much as you hope they will, though they do permit a surprising amount of beauty to be revealed by Miss Haver.

But Miss Haver's is not the only beauty filtering into Ernest Palmer's camera lens and onto Natalie Kalmus Technicolor celluloid. The mules themselves rate considerably more attractive than you'd expect from such sneered-at beasts; to a pack of city folk, Moonbeam and Crowder might even seem a sure thing in the fifth at Saratoga.

Comedian Leonard on Stage

Yes, "Scudda Hoo! Scudda Hay!" (in mule talk that means gidap), is a grade-A tribute to the earth's most luckless creatures (a matter which Brennan describes with deep feeling). Those who've enjoyed the firm's and the star's previous essays into the farmlands will find this one to their pleasure.

On the Capitol stage, you find a roly-poly comic, Jack E. Leonard; Pierre d'Angelo and Vanya, ballroom dancers; Boy Foy, one of the trickiest jugglers in the juggle world, and Marian Francis, who makes with the words and music.

Arlington Offers $500 Reward in Denekas Case

Cab Driver Reveals Dead Man Knew How to Wire Car For Bomb Blast

With police still balked in their investigation of the mysterious auto bomb killing of William A. Denekas, the Arlington County Board last night offered a $500 reward for information leading to capture of his slayer.

The reward, subject to approval by the Commonwealth's attorney, was voted during a board meeting on zoning matters at the Arlington Courthouse. In urging the action, Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard said the money may elicit information from persons now reluctant to enter the case.

Arlington detectives have questioned more than 60 men and women in their attempt to solve the murder of the 30-year-old electrical contractor last Monday. They admit the scent has "gotten cold."

Cabbie's Story Hints Suicide

Denekas was fatally injured in a bomb explosion last Monday at about 11 a. m., when he entered his car in front of the home where he lived, at 5837 North 21st st., Arlington.

In another development, police revealed that a Washington cab driver had told them Denekas once explained to him how to wire a car for a bomb explosion.

Yesterday's new information came from Harold Dazion of 1223 12th st. nw., who strode into detective headquarters shortly before noon. He claimed Denekas, in 1945, explained "in detail" precisely how to attach an explosive charge to an automobile.

While police gave the information to newsmen without comment, Chief L. Woodyard did admit later that "we don't suspect suicide at this point."

Radio Program Told How

Police also were considering the method of murder in the Denekas case may have been inspired by a radio program the night of June 2. Only four days before the fatal blast, police said, a program entitled, "The Big Story," described a similar death in the Washington area several years ago.

The program gave details as to how the death bomb was rigged to the victim's auto. If the murderer got his idea from the radio program this would mean the method of death was conceived only four days before the slaying.

Among some 30 persons attending the funeral services yesterday at Ives funeral home, 2847 Wilson blvd., Arlington, was Mrs. Helen Denekas, who had been estranged from her husband several months before his bizarre death.

Widow Calm at Funeral

Dressed in black, the widow remained completely composed throughout the 20-minute service. Also present was Mrs. Myrtle Ennis, 24-year-old divorcee of 3906 N. Washington blvd., who had a late date with Denekas Sunday.

Others at the services included Charles B. Dixon, 21-year-old Capital Transit streetcar motorman, a friend of the dead man's wife, who was quizzed by police for 3½ hours Thursday night, and his mother, Mrs. Ann Snow.

Friends of Denekas served as pallbearers. They were John T. Boyd, Lester F. Wilson, Chester Shepherd, jr.; Newton Staples (brother of Mrs. Denekas), Roger Dove and Ted Ward. Burial was in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Girl of 3, Awakened by Smoke, Gives Alarm, and 14 Flee Fire

The Washington Post

WHERE'S THERE'S SMOKE, there is fire, as even 3-year-old Linda Berry knows. Mrs. Jean Berry of 1224 36th st. nw. shows her daughter where smoke and flame came in her room

A 3-year-old girl yesterday gave the alarm of fire that routed 14 persons in four families living at 1124-28 36th st. nw.

The child, Linda Jeanne Berry, awoke her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel K. Berry, with the complaint that smoke was coming into her third-floor bedroom through a crack in the wall. Her father, who operates the Prospect Market on the first floor, called firemen.

The smoke was traced to a basement blaze in the Hilltop Cafe at 1226 36th st. nw.

Ten persons in three families living at 1228 36th st. nw., were forced out by seeping smoke and the danger that flames would spread through the partitions.

Linda had a grandstand seat outside, watching the firemen, with her 5-year-old brother, Michael K., and their parents. By 6:30 a. m. they were told it would be safe to go back to bed.

Firemen said damage was not extensive.

Probe Suggested

Fairlington Saddened By Sodding

Terming conduct of Fairmac Corporation "outrageous," Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) yesterday suggested that a congressional inquiry into Government sale of Fairlington may be necessary.

He took the stand following reports that aroused tenants of the Virginia apartment community stood helplessly by yesterday, some with tears in their eyes, as company workmen slashed and spaded out their prized shrubbery, vines and flower-beds.

The workers, some surly, some sympathetic, left behind them gashes of upturned earth. They also left behind them hurt and angry housewives muttering such things as "wanton destruction," "butchers," "broken promises," "Stalin tactics," and "Texas carpet-baggers!"

Other Crews Re-Sod Them

Later yesterday, other work crews, these with police protection, resodded the former flowerbeds as tenants shouted deprecations at them.

J. B. Howell, assistant manager of Fairlington, explained that the tenants were notified last January and February of the corporation's intention to sod to the building walls. They were told then, he said, that any flower beds that were planted would be destroyed.

Since then, said Howell, the orders were modified to permit plantings of such perennials as wygelia, azalea, evergreens, and the like under special arrangements with the rental office. Yesterday's workmen, he said, had orders to rip out "only the flowers."

Tenants, however, complained that their shrubbery and their vines were attacked indiscriminately. Several told of azalea plants hacked off at the base and uprooted; one woman said her maple sapling was cut down with a machete even while she protested. Another said a workman told her group they had orders to "cut out everything but the rosebushes."

Nettled by the actions, Smith promptly wrote to Alexander F. McMillan, acting general director of Defense Homes Corporation, demanding to know what, if any, control the Government agency still had to protect the tenants.

Yesterday's outdoor activities centered mainly in the South Stafford st. sector of South Fairlington. Work crews went methodically down the line, despite loud protestations. One workman, it was reported, "took a swipe" with his scythe and barely missed the hand of a woman as she reached down to protect a plant.

Others apologized for "what we have to do."

Complainants almost unanimously asked that their names be omitted in news account.

"We still have to live here," one said.

Flower Shop Holdup Aided By Phone Call

A tall young bandit who may have used a telephoning accomplice yesterday robbed a flower shop proprietress of $452, and escaped afoot.

The loss was reported by Mrs. Rebecca Belfield, manager of the Victor Flower Shop at 919 11th st. nw., who said she was accosted as she returned from answering a telephone call in the rear of her shop. The bandit, she said, did not display a gun but menaced her with hand in pocket.

After taking the $452 she had in her purse, he demanded contents of the cash register. It was empty, she said, since the holdup occurred within a few minutes after she opened the store, at 7 a. m.

He missed "considerably more," she confided to police who refused to further discuss that angle. Mrs. Belfield of 2023 Courthouse rd., Arlington, Va., told police the telephone caller was a man who apologized lengthily for "having called the wrong number."

The victim described the bandit as a white man, about 21 years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall, of slender build and with "slicked-down" hair. He was wearing a gray-blue slack suit, she said.

Coroner Calls District Man, 61, Shotgun Suicide

Isaac Page, 61, went to the rear of his home at 1707½ Marion ct. nw. at about 11:30 a. m. yesterday, rigged up a shotgun and then fired a fatal blast into his head.

Police said Paige had propped the shotgun on a block of wood in a back yard shed and used a stick with a bent nail at the end to work the trigger. The victim's son, Eddie Page, told police his father was despondent because heart trouble prevented him from working.

A certificate of suicide was issued

Fiction About a 'Stolen' Radio Costs 3 in Store $25 Apiece

It cost a delicatessen proprietor and his two clerks $25 yesterday for the steps they took to recover their missing $30 radio.

The three posted and elected to forfeit that much each on charges of faking a report of an armed holdup to get police action on the periodic disappearance of their portable radio, police disclosed.

Forfeiting the collateral were Charles A. Fuchs, 40, of 2147 O st. nw., proprietor of the store at 2032 P st. nw.; Austin B. Kiplinger, 29, who lives above the shop, and Bernard H. Leitz, 28, of 1705 P st. nw.

Precinct Detectives Donald Weber and R. W. Mowrer said they cracked the case when a fourth man, the radio borrower, reported he bought the portable for $5 from a man answering the description of the reported bandit. He "broke" and "told the truth," the detectives said when advised he would be held on a charge of receiving stolen goods.

The truth was, said detectives, that when he borrewed the store radio once too often without asking his friends, they reported it taken by a holdup man along with $22 that "showed up short" on the cash register. And when he tried to return the radio Tuesday, the day he read the holdup story in the newspapers, he was urged to follow through and report he bought it.

A recheck of the cash receipts, said detectives, showed no money was missing.

Retail Meat Prices Hit Record High

Steak at $1 Mark; Further Increases Reported on Way; Lamb and Veal Up

Retail beef prices here have hit an all-time high, with further increases in sight, local meat dealers said yesterday.

Prices for lamb and veal have also increased, food officials said, but they have not generally surpased previous postwar levels.

Almost all cuts of steaks are just at the $1 mark or within a few cents of it, a spot check showed, with the average price at 99 cents. In a number of stores, porterhouse and sirloin steaks were priced at $1.15 a pound—and higher.

Profits Cut to Hold

Retailers contended that they should be getting at least $1.10 a pound for steak in order to make their normal profit markup.

One chain store official said, "We have not made any money in our meat department for months. So far we have kept steaks under the $1 mark by cutting our profit, but I don't think we can do it any longer."

The operator of a large independent market commented, "We're just marking time, waiting for one of the large dealers to put his price over a dollar. We have to do it, or stop selling beef, but nobody wants to be the first to pass that psychological $1 mark."

Normally "cheaper" cuts of beef, such as chuck roast, were up in the 65-70-cent bracket in many stores. Loin lamb chops ranged from 85 cents to $1 a pound in most markets, and one retailer said the wholesale price of lamb had been rising steadily for weeks, gaining 4 cents a pound since Monday.

Soaring in General

Beef prices here have hit the $1 mark on several occasions since the end of OPA controls, notably in the fall of 1946 and last summer. However, local food dealers said these $1 prices were not as general then as they are at present.

While New York egg prices hit their highest June level in 14 years, with Grade A white eggs at 75 cents a dozen, most local prices were several cents below that listing.

Henry T. Males, chairman of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association's butter and egg division, said current eggs prices are 10 cents a dozen higher than last June 10 here. But he said that present local prices of about 68 cents a dozen compare with 85-cent listings of last fall.

Police Seize Defiant Man Waving Rifle

Two scout car patrolmen were held at bay yesterday by an alleged wife-beater armed with a .22-caliber automatic rifle, police reported.

But even as emergency squad cars equipped with tear gas guns were rushing to 4612 B st. se., the suspect hid his gun and walked out, his baby in his arms to protect him, the police said.

The man, Howard E. Parker, 24, who police said is a guard at National Airport, was charged with assault on police officers, and assault on his wife, Dorothy.

Patrolmen Tarver Thomas and Samuel Gough, responding to a telephoned call for help from the wife, said they were confronted by Parker as they started to mount the stairway to his second-floor apartment. Parker, they said, pointed the rifle at them, and told them he'd shoot if they came in without a warrant. They ducked under the stairs, and ordered him to throw down his gun.

Then, while Thomas stood guard, Gough slipped out and radioed for reinforcements. Parker, however, had gone back into his home, and hid the rifle under a mattress, the police related.

When the reinforcements arrived, they found Thomas and Gough sitting astride a subdued husband at the top of the stairs. Parker required some repairs at Gallinger Hospital for cuts and bruises, it was reported.

McNayr Blasts P-TA Letter on Teachers' Pay

Montgomery County Supervisor I. G. McNayr yesterday described as "an outrage" a letter distributed to county schoolchildren advising parents to support full school budget demands.

The development was the latest in a county-wide controversy over a 1948-49 school budget request of $3,429,000, more than one million over the current appropriation.

McNayr has remained silent in the dispute over his recommended $554,000 cut in the school board request, but, angered by the letter yesterday, he issued a strongly worded statement.

The letter, distributed by the County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, advised parents of 18,000 school children to write, wire or telephone the County Commissioners, whose addresses were listed.

Presented by Daughter

McNayr said the letter was presented to him by his 7-year-old daughter, Mary Ann, a student at the Rockville Elementary School. The official said his daughter quoted her teacher as saying: "Your daddy is the man keeping us from getting our money."

The mimeographed letter, signed by President Nathan R. Gilbert of the council, was accompanied by a copy of a school board letter to the commissioners that warned of curtailed services if the McNayr budget slash is approved.

"The actions of the Board of Education, its administrative staff and the P-TA Council are to be deplored," McNayr said. He heatedly described the Board of Education letter as being "completely misleading and emotion arousing."

He said his suggested budget increase of $487,000 for county schools includes increments of between $100 and $200 for all teachers as well as funds for hiring 50 additional teachers with starting pay of at least $2600. He also accused school officials of adopting a higher salary scale than the one approved by county budget officers.

Average Now $3569

"The citizens should know," McNayr said, "that the average teacher salary is now $3569, which includes salaries ranging from a base of $2600 up to top principal pay of $6700. He said his budget proposal would raise the average salary to $3896 with top principal pay of $6900.

Replying to School Board "threats" that 19 kindergartens, special instruction in music and art and driving training would have to be eliminated, McNayr labeled the statements as "propaganda."

"We propose to give them half a million more dollars than they had this year and yet they speak of eliminating services," he said.

He was joined by President Brooke Johns of the county board, who declared, "I'm getting tired of these pressure tactics and they will not influence me."

In another development, the County Education Association said the McNayr budget proposal had led to "widespread consternation, discouragement and resentment" among teachers and that failure to grant the requested $728,000 for teacher salary increases would be "a breach of faith."

'Always So Good'

Girl, 6, Prints Reasons Why Dad Is Ideal

"I know my Daddy is the most wonderful in all the world because he is always so good . . ."

Patti Proctor of 5029 25th rd. N., Arlington, who's just 6, had that to say about her Pop, Harry W. Proctor, yesterday. Since she's just a little girl and can't write too well, she printed her letter to The Washington Post.

Lots of other children, young and old, wrote, too, telling why their Dad should win top honors in the Ideal Father Contest. But there is still time for you. Just make sure your letter is postmarked by midnight, June 16.

Nine-year-old Margie Pessagno, of 1932 Naylor rd. se., thinks her father "is the best father because he buys me ice cream and hot dogs and also candy." Besides that, she writes, "he is so nice and kind."

Mildred J. Fitzgerald of 1302 57th ave. ne., who's grown up and married now, nominated her dad because "he has been a father and a mother to me."

Loud Speaker Rule Revision Urged by West

Revision of regulations regarding use of loud speakers on District streets to comply with a recent United States Supreme Court decision—was recommended by Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West yesterday.

He informed the Commissioners that the District's present regulation, which gives the police superintendent the right to use his discretion in issuing loud speaker permits, is similar to a law declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, suggested that rules governing use of loud speakers should be spelled out in regulation, rather than left to the judgment of police officials.

West suggested that sound experts be consulted to determine the proper number of decibels (volume) of sound that should be permitted. Proper time limits and permissible areas for use of loud speakers also should be designated in the regulation, he indicated.

The matter was discussed in connection with the application of Veterans for Eisenhower for permission to tour District streets Sunday and Monday with a mobile loud speaker unit.

The Police Department issued the permit on the recommendation of the Commissioners. The veterans' organization may "plug" for Eisenhower's candidacy between 1 and 7 p. m. Sunday and 8 a. m. and 8 p. m. Monday, provided they do not encroach on "quiet zones" near hospitals or disturb church services, the Commissioners ruled.

Wife to Find Sympathetic End To Story of Priest Pretender

A sympathetic ending was promised Novelist Mabel Seeley by District law officials yesterday in the bizarre story of her husband's arrest here while pretending to be a Catholic University priest.

Francis X. Walsh, court-appointed attorney for Dr. Kenneth Seeley, said Assistant United States Attorney J. Warren Wilson had agreed to drop unlawful entry charges against Dr. Seeley when the latter is released from Gallinger Hospital in the custody of his wife. She is expected to come here from their home in Minneapolis the first of the week.

Dr. Seeley, a former University of Minnesota teacher, was committed to the hospital for mental examination following his arrest Wednesday on the Catholic University campus in clerical garb.

According to police he had entered the room of the Rev. John B. Zachary, a professor of chemistry at the university, Tuesday night and taken one of the priest's cassocks, leaving his own suit, wallet and identification papers.

Among the confused and contradictory stories Dr. Seeley told police was one to the effect that he was Father Zachary. Yesterday Father Zachary said he did not know Dr. Seeley and did not recall ever having seen the man who assumed his identity, apparently with the aid of information gleaned from the priest's passport, which was in the room.

According to Walsh and a Gallinger Hospital psychiatrist, Dr. Seeley evidently came to Washington to take some work in languages at Catholic University.

He had previously suffered a breakdown in health attributed to overwork on his Ph.D. degree.

The Seeleys, a devoted couple, were married about 20 years ago, shortly after her graduation from the University of Minnesota. Dr. Seeley is a University of Wisconsin graduate, and also studied at the University of Chicago.

During the early days of their marriage he assisted her with her writing.

Mrs. Seeley's first book, "The Listening House," a mystery novel, was published in 1938. Her other books include "The Crying Sisters," 1939; "The Whispering Cup," 1940; "The Chuckling Fingers," 1940; "Eleven Came Back," 1943, and "Woman of Property," 1947.

A number of Mrs. Seeley's books have appeared in popular reprints and "Women of Property" was a book club selection.

$200 Teacher Raise Voted By 'Hill' Unit Over Protest

House D. C. Group Also Approves Bill To Equalize Pay of All M. A. Holders

A $200 one-year pay increase for Washington school teachers won quick approval of the House District Committee yesterday. The bill is slated for House action Monday.

Also approved at the request of Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.) was a bill to equalize salary treatment given to teachers with a master's degree in the public school system as compared with new teachers being hired.

The $200 pay boost is tied directly to whatever decision Congress makes on a general pay increase for Federal and District workers. If the general pay increases are approved, the teachers pay bill would take effect July 1 and the increase would end June 30, 1949. If there is not Federal pay increase there would be none for teachers.

District Committee approval of the $200 figure overrode demands of teachers groups at a morning hearing for an increase that would at least equal whatever Congress finally gives to Federal and other District employes. The smallest increase generally discussed for Federal and District classified employes would be $360 a year. The House has approved a tentative pay increase figure of $500 for Washington police and firemen, with the understanding that the final figure will be the same as that fixed by Federal pay legislation.

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning testified that members of the school board strongly favor giving teachers the same salary increase treatment that other District employes would be given by a Federal pay bill.

Dr. Corning pointed out that the general increase granted by last year's teacher pay bill was $150 per year per person. He said the average salary of Washington's school teachers is now $3398. He said Washington ranks number 15 in the 20 largest cities in terms of the average annual salaries actually paid to teachers. That average, he said, goes as high as $4400 elsewhere.

Representative Bates, whose District Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee conducted the three-hour-pay hearing, told the full District Committee that the $200 increase would be giving pretty fair treatment to the teachers.

D. C. Budget Total Is Fixed

the conference group was $150,000 for sewer construction. The increase makes the sewer construction fund for next year $2,561,000.

Other additions to the bill included $20,000 for reequipping Western High School and $19,500 for additional personnel in the offices of the District assessor, tax collector and auditor.

Offsetting a part of the increase was a committee decision to knock out $30,000 for planning a new psychiatric building at Gallinger Hospital. Another $2000 was added to the Corporation Counsel's budget.

Committee aides pointed out that another $150,000 may be appropriated from District funds before Congress adjourns for continuing Washington child day care centers.

A bill to authorize the day care appropriation is awaiting the President's signature.

The conference group indorsed the decision of the Senate to hold back funds for 50 of the 207 additional police jobs approved by the House.

The group also indorsed a Senate decision that cut $100,000 for teachers' salaries from the school budget. Where the Senate had called for eliminating 50 teaching positions for the white schools in line with the reduction in funds, the conference group left the way open for school officials to make their own decision on how to comply with the reduced teaching budget.

Congressman Acquitted in Traffic Court

Representative Robert F. Rich (R., Pa.) yesterday was found innocent of driving through a red light in Bethesda on June 4 after he admitted in court he called the arresting officer a "liar."

Rich told Judge Warren Browning in Bethesda Police Court he was "sorry" he called Pvt. Frank Cook a "liar" but said he was "provoked" into it by Cook's insistence he had gone through the red light.

Judge Browning said his innocent ruling which returned $11.45 collateral to Rich was based on uncertainty as to where the Representative's car was when the light turned red at Wisconsin and Cordell aves. The legislator testified the light turned amber as he entered the intersection while Cook said the light was already red.

Cook said he followed the Congressman's car after a motorist complained the vehicle had gone through a red light at Wisconsin and Dorset aves.

Cook said Rich told him when he stopped him he was "in a hurry to get to a meeting in Pennsylvania."

Spray May Double Cherry Bloom Life

A spray that may double the life of Washington's seasonal ttraction, the famed Japanese cherry blossoms, is being ested by Government plant scientists, it was disclosed esterday.

Results of preliminary tests made this spring on several types of trees at little-frequented spots were revealed by National Park Service experimenters. Initial treatments, they said, prolonged by about one week the blossoms on the three main cherry species planted here.

The growth regulators, however, will not be used on all cherry trees here next spring, said Harry T. Thompson, assistant superintendent of parks. Thompson said, "We can't shoot the works till we're sure there are no harmful after-effects."

The tests are being carried on by Horace V. Wester, plant pathologist for National Capital Parks, and Dr. Paul C. Marth, plant physiologist of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The purpose of the experiments, of course, is to find means to extend the season's blossoms to two full weekends to bring in more visitors. The blossoms, now a five-day wonder, annually attract about 500,000 persons, Thompson said.

Rescue League And CU Named In Capps Will

Large bequests to Catholic University and the Washington Animal Rescue League were provided by the will of Mrs. Edna Ward Capps of 1823 Jefferson pl. nw., widow of Rear Adm. Washington Lee Capps, who died May 18 this year.

Mrs. Capps' will, disposing of an estate estimated at more than $770,000, was filed for probate in the District Court yesterday. Mrs. Capps, who was widely known as a cat fancier, left her only surviving pet, Pola, 14 years old, to her maid, Josephine Lewis of Purcellville, Va., and provided for an income of up to $100 a month for Miss Lewis for life.

Other bequests were $5000 to Charles M. Eichelberger of 2808 North Vernon ave., Arlington, Va., a Navy friend of the late Rear Admiral; $10,000 to the Animal Rescue League, and small bequests to friends and relatives. The bulk of the estate was left to Mrs. Capps' sister, Miss Hilda Ward of the Hotel Wellington, New York City, for life, after which $75,000 is to go to Catholic University and half the remainder to the Animal Rescue League. One fourth of the remainder is to go to the Pennsylvania Women's Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and another fourth to any charitable organizations designated by the trustees of the estate.

Admiral Capps left a trust fund, the value of which was not set out. His widow's will directed that this be divided between Catholic and Harvard Universities.

Richard O'Dell Wilson, 9, has been missing from his home, at 1622 R st. se., since last Saturday, police disclosed yesterday.

The parents have heard reports from schoolmates that the boy has been seen in nearby woods. However, the woods have been thoroughly searched by police and neighbors and no sign of the boy has been seen.

The father, a cab driver, told police his son had no money when he disappeared. He has brown hair and blue eyes and when he was last seen was wearing a blue knit yellow-striped shirt, blue dungarees and black tennis shoes.

New Building Drive Urged At Bell School

Students at the D. C. Bell Vocational School, 7th and O sts. nw., who staged a strike Thursday protesting the condition of their quarters, yesterday were preparing letters to the Board of Education listing reasons why they need a new building.

Among student complaints are that floors of the school are "almost rotted through" and the basement is "full of rats." The pupils said they felt chances of getting out of the building and into new quarters by September are slim.

The hour's strike ended after Lawson J. Cantrell, associate superintendent of schools, told the boys that the Board of Education is "anxious" to abandon Bell. He suggested that they write letters and elect a committee to work for a new school.

The school board, which a year ago voted to move Bell into vacant rooms in Central High School, now is considering the closing of Powell Junior High School and use of the building to house the vocational school.

Cantrell said yesterday that "it is impossible to develop a complete school" in the present Bell building. There are no facilities for sports or cadets, the school does not have a lunchroom and the auditorium has been closed by the Fire Department.

House D. C. Group Favors Off-Street Parking Bill

The House District Committee yesterday approved legislation to promote development of off-street parking facilities in the District.

Also approved was a resolution calling for the Commissioners to investigate comparative parking rates and services here and in other cities, and report to Congress on their survey early next year.

The off-street parking bill would let the District lease land it owns or acquires for 50-year periods for construction of parking garages by private enterprise. There is now a five-year limit on leases.

He was willing, however, to discuss cancer control as it exists in Sweden, where he is director of the Radium Hemmet, a government-owned cancer control center in Stockholm.

Dr. Berven stressed the need of following up patients who have been treated for cancer and to instruct young doctors in the importance of diagnosing the disease in its earliest stages.

The insemination program sponsored by the university has increased this year to 6000 injections as against 3600 last year for the same first months. Approximately 1500 dairymen now are using the service.

Rail Gang Caused Wreck, B.&O. Hints

The possibility that construction work caused the train wreck at Laurel, Md., Thursday seemed stronger yesterday as a two-way investigation was launched.

Both the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the Interstate Commerce Commission began separate probes to determine what caused the four rear cars of the B. & O. crack train, The Diplomat, to leave the rails opposite the Laurel race track.

One man, a dining car waiter, lost his life in the wreck and more than 50 persons were injured. Of the injured, 12 still remained in hospitals yesterday.

Railroad officials admitted that missing spikes could have caused the rail spread which sent the cars hurtling from the tracks.

However, J. C. Bateman, B. & O. publicity representative, put it this way:

"It is true that a section gang was working along the track where the derailment occurred. But whether this had anything to do with the accident won't be known until we have completed our investigation."

Railroad officials had previously explained that the section gang was respacing ties on the curve at Laurel before the St. Louis to New York Diplomat, 40 minutes out of Washington, roared past.

Bateman admitted that the workers would have to remove spikes in respacing the ties. He said, however, that it wasn't likely that the section gang would remove more than a few spikes at a time.

The B. & O. also complained about newspaper estimates that more than 50 persons were injured in the wreck, declaring its claims department listed only 32 injured.

The Washington Post total of 53 injured was based on reports from hospitals of the number either admitted or treated.

Bateman said the B. & O. investigators would, as soon as possible, submit a report on their findings to the ICC.

However, the ICC began its own investigation Thursday immediately after learning of the derailment. Shirley N. Mills, ICC director of safety, said Inspectors H. R. Longhurst of Washington and G. C. Finney of Baltimore had been assigned to the investigation.

Mills said they will study the scene of the wreck and the equipment and question witnesses before making a report to the ICC. Their findings will provide the basis for the ICC report on the wreck. Mills said the report may not be available for several weeks.

Most of those involved in the wreck escaped serious injury. Nobody was critically hurt. However, four persons were still in St. Agnes Hospital, Baltimore, yesterday, one in University Hospital, Baltimore, two in Leland Memorial Hospital at Riverdale, one in Prince Georges General Hospital at Cheverly, three in Freedmen's Hospital and one in Providence Hospital.

The tracking ripped up by the cars when they were derailed was repaired late Thursday and the four derailed cars were hoisted back on the tracks yesterday and hauled to the B. & O. Mount Clare shops near Baltimore for repairs.

Anti-Lynch Bill Faces Group Vote Monday

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday rushed a modified anti-lynching measure toward a final committee vote Monday, adding one more major bill to the GOP's unfinished business.

Leaders said Senate action this session hinges on whether Congress adjourns June 19 or decides to return to work between or after the conventions.

Before recessing over the weekend the committee struck from the bill, on motion of Senator James O. Eastland (R., Miss.) proposed penalties against any State, county, or community where a lynching occurs.

Vote Disappoints Ferguson

Southerners, joined by some Republicans and Northern Democrats, argued the provision was "unconstitutional." Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.), acting chairman, did not announce the vote.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), told reporters he was "naturally disappointed" with the vote but "I'm trying to get out of the committee the best bill I can."

Following elimination of this section, described as the most controversial in the bill, the committee agreed to reach a final vote Monday on the bill and all pending amendments.

Other modifications included substitution of a new preamble, containing language "less objectionable" to the South, to the statement of principles and purposes appearing in the first three sections of the bill.

Kidnaping Penalties Added

Another change added Federal kidnaping penalties to the proposed penalties against lynching. Detailed revisions were not disclosed pending Monday's final vote.

The bill still makes Federal or local officers who wilfuly fail or refuse to make "all diligent efforts" to prevent a lynching subject to a $5000 fine or five years in jail for committing a felony. It would be the duty of the Attorney General to investigate any such failure.

Officers and persons guilty of conspiring in a lynching would be liable to civil suit for damage to the victim's person or property.

Any person convicted of participating in a lynching or inciting mob violence resulting in one would receive the maximum penalty of $10,000 or 20 years' imprisonment.

No Longer a "Must" Bill

Section 9, stricken yesterday on motion of Eastland, made any governmental subdivision "responsible for any lynching which follows upon the seizure and abduction of the victim within its territorial jurisdiction."

Unless such a community could prove local officers used "all diligence" or lacked knowledge of the lynching, the abandoned provision would have imposed a $2000 to $10,000 fine.

Weeks ago, Senate Republicans made the bill a "must," and talked of plans to invoke cloture to break a filibuster. But Thursday's full Republican conference failed to schedule definite action. One party spokesman said that if Congress holds to its June 10 adjournment goal the Senate will call up no legislation against which filibuster threatens.

Favorable action by the Judiciary committee Monday would give the Senate the choice of a civil rights test on anti-poll tax legislation, already on the calendar, or the modified anti-lynch bill.

The two vied for a "must" spot against this other unfinished business: Extension of Atomic Energy Commission terms, Federal pay-raise legislation, a long-range farm program, the equal rights constitutional amendment, repeal of the Federal oleo tax, anti-Communist legislation, and a bill giving the States title to submerged coastal oil lands.

Survey Brands Cheltenham Effort 'Futile'

Baltimore, June 11 (AP).—A State education department survey released today said it found "inappropriate and inadequate" classroom and cottage facilities and "misconceptions" regarding education at the Cheltenham School for Boys.

The report cited a "feeling of futility and oppressiveness which pervades the security unit, . . . sterile drilling in isolated bookish facts," as "cases in point."

It said the security unit was the "most undesirable phase of the training program"

Any attempt at effective educational or social rehabilitation under the present system, the report went on, is "futile'

"The kind of teaching observed in the security unit seems meaningless to the boys' lives," the investigators reported. "The entire atmosphere and tone of the unit is negative and anti-social. No positive program of readjustment was in evidence."

It recommended that the present unit be abolished "as soon as an acceptable plan can be set up."

Band's Warning Ends Girl Scout Camp for 2 Races

Birmingham, Ala., June 11 (U.P.). A Girl Scout official said tonight that a band of white-robed, hooded men had warned two white girls to leave a camp in which they were instructing a score of Negro Girl Scout leaders.

The girls reported that the men looked like Ku Klux Klansmen, Mrs. L. E. Geohegan, a member of the Birmingham Girl Scout Council, said.

She told authorities two white girls from memphis, Tenn., were in charge of a "leadership training" unit a Camp Pauline Bray Fletcher south of Bessemer, Ala., and that about 20 Negro girls from five Southern States were there. They had separate sleeping and eating facilities.

The camp was broken up today and the girls of both races returned to their homes.

GI Elbow Benders Catching Rash Off Jap Bars

Tokyo, June 11 (U.P.).—American troops who spend too much time practicing the fine art of elbow bending are becoming the victims of an "occupational disease," Army doctors said today.

Medical officers said the elbows of soldiers who frequent Japanese saloons are breaking out in a rash. The affliction is caused by bars painted with lacquer containing the chemical urushiol.

Senators Vote $50,000 For Big Business Probe

The Senate Rules Committee yesterday approved the expenditure of $50,000 for an investigation into the extent and character of economic concentration in this country.

The investigation would be made by the Senate Commerce Committee. It grows out of a resolution by Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) which originally called for a study of the effect of two recent Supreme Court decisions on consumer prices.

The Senate still must pass on the resolution.

On the Capital Party Front

MISS ALICE DIGGS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Diggs, entertained at luncheon on Thursday at the Sulgrave Club for Miss Averill Borden, daughter of Capt. John T. Borden, USN, and Mrs. Borden, who will be married on Tuesday to Oscar Tilman Paul.

Sharing honors with the bride-elect was Miss Jean Lysle, a classmate of the hostess at Bradford Junior College, who is here from Leavenworth, Kans., to visit Miss Diggs.

The 24 guests included members of Miss Borden's bridal party, the June debutantes and several of Miss Diggs' sister debutantes of last winter. Mrs. Borden, mother of the bride-to-be, and Mrs. Diggs, mother of the hostess, also attended.

A NUMBER of parties have been given in honor of Miss Isabelle Mercedes Barry, whose marriage to Norman Francis Manders takes place today.

Showers were given by Miss Mary Kathleen Scully, Miss Mary Ellen Fitzgerald and Miss Theresa Whelan. Mrs. James A. Donohoe, jr., was hostess at a luncheon on June 5, and Mr. and Mrs. David E. Barry entertained for their daughter on Thursday evening.

MRS. PAUL MAY, JR., entertained Thursday at Normandy Farms in honor of Miss Elizabeth Moulton, bride-elect of L. M. Bamel. The wedding will take place June 15 at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament.

A LARGE HEART of white carnations initialed with colored flowers formed the centerpiece for the buffet table at the party which Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Dudley gave yesterday for Miss Elenita Dyer and her fiance, Lieut. Col. James H. Batte.

The 6 to 8 p. m. affair took place in the Dudley apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel and was attended by members of the bridal party and friends of the young couple who will be married June 17.

The Feminine Touch

Falls Church Adds Woman To Council

A feminine touch will return to the Falls Church Town Council for the first time in 12 years when Mrs. Merrill Lee Chanel takes office September 1.

MRS. CHANEL

Mrs. Chanel was elected from the town's First Ward in Tuesday's elections, defeating Incumbent James E. Durant, 228 to 223. She will be the fourth woman in the town's history to serve on the council.

Number 1 item on her personal agenda, she said yesterday, will be health, safety and welfare for Falls Church children. She also thinks the town needs more sidewalks, particularly on main town highways such as Broad st. and Lee hwy.

Sidewalks on these highways, she declared, would cut down on the town's child accident rate. The fact that the town has doubled in population since 1940 emphasizes the need for such sidewalks, she says.

Better sanitary facilities at the town's Madison elementary school and better supervised activities for children during after-school hours also rate high on her woman's program for the town.

On the issue of Falls Church annexing large sections of adjacent Fairfax County, she says she feels the town should wait until the areas request such annexation.

Born in Falls Church and educated there, Mrs. Chanel, mother of a grown son, lives at her family home at 505 West Bond st. in Falls Church. During World War II she worked in the record section of the Justice Department. She now is employed in the accounting division of Trew Motor Co.

They're Slit to the Knee

Hobble Skirts Return As Fall Fashion Whim

By Peggy Preston

NO SOONER have we managed to scrape together a few long, full skirts, than someone declares them outmoded.

The nasty "someone" in this instance is a group of stylists and manufacturers which is staging a giant "Fashion Fair" in New York's Madison Square Garden this week. This all-embracing exposition of women's apparel has turned up the intelligence that this fall we'll walk, after a fashion, in hobble skirts. They'll reach almost to the ankles, will be skin tight and have a slit up the back.

MISS PRESTON

"The slit is necessary for walking," a press release volunteers, as an afterthought.

High priestess of the new silhouette is a diminutive Viennese designer named Jennifer. She advocates a 10-inch skirt length for street wear, but some of her dresses are considerably longer, straight as a die, and slashed right up to the knee cap.

Where, then, are our hip pads, waist minimizers and full-gathered skirts over petticoats of yesteryear? Must we hobble now, instead of swing?

Well, not altogether. A few words of comforting compromise comes from the old master himself, Philip Mangone, the man who was a pacemaker in the coat and suit field before Jennifer was ever heard of.

"There are going to be all kinds of silhouettes this fall, none of them too extreme," Mr. Mangone temporizes. "Women are going to wear what they want to, anyway, and they will have a choice."

He predicts the 12-inch hemline will be the most popular, "because it is the most becoming."

Of course, Mr. Mangone was one of the designers who never fell for the hour-glass silhouette idea in the first place. When he showed his spring collection in New York last January, there wasn't a full skirt in the lot. Not that he ever advocated a real hobble skirt. Just straight, slim, simple ones.

When Pierre Balmain, the Paris designer, brought a few imporant pieces from his collection to Washington in April, he showed several long, slim skirts, along with an equal number of full, flowing ones.

So, it is fairly safe to assume that both silhouettes will be right for the coming year. And even the style experts in New York admit that Jennifer's sensational version of the hobble skirt will be considerably modified to suit consumer taste when it reaches the stores next fall.

Buyers from all over the country who are attending the Fashion Fair are talking about the resistance of the mature woman to the exaggerated full-skirt fad. Such women, they say, have made it known in no uncertain terms that this fashion is not suited to present-day life in America. But a hobble skirt is hardly the answer to that problem.

What the big designers are actually offering for fall is a Victorian mode—more or less slim in front, with fullness at the back. These are to placate the older women. Teen-age fashions will still feature wide, circular skirts.

Ask Anne — How to Antique Alabaster Lamp

THE WAY you dress fresh vegetables has a lot to do with whether or not they make a hit at the dinner table. Take the assortment above, for instance. The carrots are made extra tasty by a parsley dressing. The new potatoes come to the table with freshly buttered jackets, and the beans have a superspecial horseradish sauce. Here's the way to make the latter:

3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1½ cups milk
3 to 4 tablespoons drained horseradish

Melt butter in saucepan; add flour and seasonings and blend. Gradually add milk while stirring and cook until smooth and thick, stirring constantly. Stir in drained horseradish. Serve hot over beans. This makes enough for 1½ pounds of beans.

I would appreciate it if you would advise me how to gold leaf or rather "antique gold leaf" a white alabaster lamp. D. K. K.

Applying gold leaf is a very time-consuming job requiring special equipment for burnishing and other steps in the application. I am told that applying gold leaf to alabaster is the most difficult of all. The experts who do it have each developed their own, almost secret process for it. So, I would suggest you turn the job over to such an expert. An art shop which does this work can be reached by calling Decatur 6639.

We have a plaster of paris garden figure, at least it was sold to us as such. After three years outdoors in a niche in the wall, it has begun to crumble and change color. The figure was originally painted. It is the statue of a little boy with reddish hair wearing an aqua suit, holding a hat full of cherries in one hand and eating a cherry with the other. So you see many colors and shades were used. Will you tell me what I can do to keep the figure from crumbling and to restore the color. M. R. S.

If some of the small parts of the figure have crumbled away, these can be built up by using a paste made by mixing glue or lacquer with plaster. Apply this to the parts which are broken, first removing all crumbled plaster of paris from the surface. Unless the figure is very broken, these softened spots can be built up very easily, by shaping the plaster with the fingers while it is wet and pliable. When the broken parts have been shaped, allow to dry thoroughly and sand the rough surfaces. Brush away all dust and give the figure four or five coats of clear spar varnish to protect the entire surface. When the varnish is thoroughly dry, brighten the colors on the statue with oil paints.

I am planning to give a birthday party for my 2-year-old daughter in June. Will you tell me just how I should go about doing so? This is her first party and I don't know very much about what should be done. What can I serve the children? How can I amuse them? How long should the little guests stay? T. S.

Limiting the number of guests to the number of years old the birthday child is, is a pretty sensible rule. At 2 years of age, two or three children of the same age accompanied by their mothers would be about right for number. Invite the guests to come after naps in the afternoon, say from four to five. Serve refreshments as soon as all have arrived. If possible, seat the guests next to their mothers at a large table. For refreshments you could serve vanilla ice cream and sponge or some other not-too-rich cake. If you wish, at each place you could have a paper hat for all to wear as they eat, and a simple favor such as a balloon or a small toy for each to take home.

When the refreshments are over the guests may wish to play a few minutes with their balloons, but very shortly they will wish to go home, so I would not plan anything in the way of organized entertainment for this age group.

PETUNIA!

When lights go out,
I'm in despair . . .

I never know
Which fuse goes where

Make a diagram of your fusebox, Petunia! On it, note which lights are on each fuse. That way you'll know in a jiffy which fuse to change, next time the lights go out.

Carelessness in Heating Milk May Be Cause of Baby's Upset

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

In the coldest weather and in the heat of summer there is an added temptation to deal with milk in ways which can be dangerous.

During the winter a mother feels that she can save herself a frigid interlude in the kitchen in the middle of the night if she heats the baby's milk when she goes to bed. Then she pops it into a thermos, or wraps the bottle in some covering, expecting it to stay warm until the baby wakens and cries for it.

In summer she takes the bottle of warm milk with her to a picnic, or to some friend's home, or while she is shopping and believes that she has solved the problem of feeding the baby at unexpected times.

This is a true story told me by the mother herself. It had been her custom to heat the baby's middle-of-the-night bottle when she went to bed, and feed it at any hour the baby wanted it.

For months she was harassed by her baby's chronic diarrhea. He was taken to a doctor who could find no cause for it until after repeated discussions he discovered this particular practice. He was horrified and told her so and counseled that she stop it immediately. You already know that this ended the diarrhea promptly.

Milk is a perishable food. Every precaution is taken by the milkers and dairymen to preserve it from spoiling. No matter how clean, it contains a certain percentage of bacteria.

But the moment any milk is heated, the bacteria in it begin to grow and multiply. In a relatively short time they can reach dangerous proportions. The milk may not sour, but the bacteria may be truly harmful to the baby. The prevalence, in the old days, of the dreaded "summer complaint" stemmed from our inadequate knowledge of how dangerous warm milk can become.

The first rule of good milk care is to keep it cold. Put it on ice immediately when received. Cool it after it has been warmed in formula making. Keep it on ice until ready to be heated to feed the baby. No conscientious mother can afford to disregard any of these practices.

Mrs. Eisenhower Gives 'Ike' the Cooking Honors

"Ike always has been a fine cook and still is the best in our family," said Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower, "General Ike's" wife, in the June issue of Today's Woman magazine.

General Eisenhower, member of a family of seven boys, had learned to pitch in and help his mother in the kitchen while still very young. He taught Mrs. Eisenhower to cook, but she soon caught on to the homemaking skills and established a reputation as a clever hostess.

Speaks From Experience

Speaking of the early days of her marriage, Mrs. Eisenhower says, "I can speak as strongly as I like about the dreadful mistakes young wives make if they think their whims are law, because I know, now, that I was a spoiled brat when I was married. I was 19. I did not know how to cook, or run a house, and I did not have the vaguest idea of the value of a dollar." As the story develops it is obvious that Mrs. Eisenhower lost no time developing those housewifely skills she had lacked when she was married.

Mrs. Eisenhower tells an amusing anecdote about the impact of General Eisenhower's personality upon her father. As Mamie Doud, Mrs. Eisenhower first met young Lieutenant Eisenhower at Fort Sam Houston in Texas during the winter of 1915. The Douds lived in Denver, but made an annual trip during the winter to San Antonio. The day after the two young people had met, the Doud family went on a fishing trip which kept them away all day. On their return they found that Dwight Eisenhower had telephoned 15 times during the day. Mrs. Eisenhower recalls that her father's comment was, "That young man seems to have a streak of persistence."

In speaking about the desire of most men for a carefully kept and restful home atmosphere, Mrs. Eisenhower counsels, "If new wives would remember that one of their most important jobs is to keep the house orderly at all times, they would be a long step ahead. Once men get out of West Point or out of service they seem to revel in being disorderly about their belongings. But it is a foolish wife who does the same thing. Military training may not have made your husband neat himself, but it has made him an authority on neatness!"

Advice on Budget

With the budget problem what it is these days, it is interesting to note that the major problem for Mrs. Eisenhower as a young wife was to learn to handle money. She says that from the beginning of her married life, her husband always turned over all his pay to her to administer. Her comment is, "If a husband makes his wife the administrator of the money, her pride will not let her go in debt." For today's young brides she says, "Strictly cash would be my slogan if I were newly married today. Buying things on time, no matter how much easier it makes things at the moment, seems to me to be one of the most vicious traps into which a bride can fall."

"Being a wife is the best career that life has to offer a woman," concludes Mrs. Eisenhower.

Video Suggestion From Half-a-Loafer

Everybody seems to be unhappy about the decision not to televize the Zale-Graziano fight.

The video industry lost a top-notch attraction; prospective sponsors lost a chance to reach a large audience; the promoters lost some $75,000 in fees for the television rights; and set owners lost a hoped-for return on their substantial investment in receivers.

It seems to me that much of this unhappiness could have been eliminated, by leaving the fight off television stations in the vicinity of New York City and piping it along to the remainder of the network.

New York fans could have attended the fight in person, thereby swelling the boxoffice figures and making the promoters happy. Out-of-town fans (who wouldn't have bought tickets anyhow) could have tuned in the show, and the video industry would have had half-a-loaf instead of no loaf at all.

The promoters of the fight wouldn't have had to worry about New York fans picking up the network broadcast from another station because, roughly speaking, video transmitters are effective only to the horizon.

I trust that the television industry will show a proper appreciation for my suggestion, so that those of us who do our televiewing in pubs can go back to nursing one bottle of beer through $6.60 worth of championship boxing.

AIN'T IT THE TRUTH?

I think we used this one several months ago, when another theater led with its chin, but it's worth repeating.

Frank Wilson of 1607 N. Edison st., Arlington, Va., winced when the Wilson Theater recently advertised:

NEWSMAN'S WIFE NEEDS PLENTY OF PATIENCE

Somehow, she managed to keep her birthday orchid fresh. Five days late, I was finally ready to mark the anniversary by taking her to lunch.

"I'm flattered that you could spare the time for poor little me," she chided as we left WINX after my broadcast.

"Don't rub it in," I protested. "You know how busy I've been. I'll just stop by the office, and see whether Irwin was able to find a cartoon idea in my stuff for tomorrow, and then I'll take you right out to lunch."

But at the office City Editor Gilbert greeted me with unaccustomed enthusiasm.

"Train wreck," he said--meantime turning me around and starting me back toward the door. "Laurel Race Track. We've got four men on the way; you're No. 5. Goodby."

"But my wife . . . her birthday . . . five days she's been waiting for . . ."

"Tough, isn't it?" sympathized Gilbert. "Let's have a heart-to-heart talk about it the minute you get back."

The orchid seemed to wilt a little more, but the girl was made of sterner stuff. Resignedly, she murmured:

"Something told me I'd pay for my own lunch again."

And with that she was off, shaking her head and clucking gently to herself.

ANOTHER BRITON WANTS 'PEACE IN OUR CHIMES'

American University's mighty carillon was in especially good voice, and the neighborhood echoed the sound of its chimes.

In the office of the undergraduate magazine "Campus Time," the telephone rang. The caller was unmistakably British.

"Now look here, blawst it. I know as many hymns as the next man, but blawst it all, I've now heard all of them three times over. Those blawsted chimes of yours . . ."

"But, sir," protested the startled undergraduate, "this is Campus Time. Not campus chimes--Campus Time magazine."

"Campus Chime?" sputtered the irate Britisher. "What in thunderation is the difference between Campus Chime and campus chimes? I tell you, those blawsted chimes of yours are driving me . . ."

The weary undergraduate quietly hung up. After all, a bloke can take just so much--blawst it all.

NEW YORK.—One night in the Stork Club Morton Downey stopped at Henry Fonda's table and Fonda asked him: "What's new?" . . . "Now mind you," said Downey, "what I'm about to tell you is only rumor, and I can't vouch for it authenticity, but" . . . "Whisper it, Morton, whisper it," Fonda interrupted. "Gossip always sounds more believable when it's whispered."

Jack Kapp, head of Decca Records, wrote to the McAfee Shoe Co. in London, where he had been fitted some years ago, and ordered a pair of shoes . . . The shoes were delivered, with a bill for $29. A few days after Kapp paid the bill, he received a letter from the London company stating that he had been overcharged—that the price was $25 and he was entitled to a $4 refund. Because of the currency-export restrictions, however, the company was not permitted to send him the $4, and so Kapp has a $4 credit, payable to him or to his friends, but only in England.

During the inspection tour of Brooklyn's crime-breeding places by Judge Sam Leibowitz and other officials—a tour which resulted in demands by the State Liquor Authority that proof of violations be submitted—Inspector Whelan and Chief Probation Officer Fitzgerald entered a barroom. They do not assert that this is a proof that it's a hangout for criminals—but as soon as these two unknown men entered, the people at the bar and at the tables glanced at them, saw that they were strangers—and casually lined up against the wall, put their hands up and waited to be frisked.

The film-popularity polls again show Bing Crosby in the No. 1 spot, despite the fact that his hair has thinned, his middle bulges and his ears swing wide. Before it was discovered that Crosby's voice, charm and naturalness could be parlayed into the foremost box-office attraction in Hollywood, Paramount tried to present him as a pretty boy. Crosby didn't mind the toupee, nor did he object to the restraining belt. But during the shooting of "Anything Goes" Crosby suddenly ripped off the tape which pinned his ears back, and told Director Lewis Milestone: "'A loving cup.' 'A cab with its doors open.' That's the worst they can say. From now on they'll see me as I am."

Oilmen Still Hope for Tidelands

By Drew Pearson

Out on the West Coast, the oil boys and the Pauley pals have been licking their chops over the arrival of President Truman and their chance to persuade him to right-about-face on tidelands oil.

Rumely

They hope that, with a tough campaign and the Democratic cupboard bare, they may be able to persuade the President not to veto a tidelands oil bill this time.

All of which is doubtful. Harry Truman doesn't change easily. Furthermore, if there was one thing he got fed up on, as a Senator, it was lobbyists; and the tidelands oil crowd have been using the most variegated assortment of lobbyists ever seen in Washington.

Of them, perhaps the weirdest—though one of the most effective—is Dr. Edward A. Rumely, who served a term as a German agent after World War I, was pardoned under interesting circumstances, and who has more recently managed to enrapture a large collection of millionaires and lesser lights than almost any other lobbyist in the Nation.

Rumley operates under the pontificial and high-sounding name of the "Committee for Constitutional Government." And he has been busy as a bird-dog distributing literature supporting the tidelands oil lobby—literature which he claims is "educational" and therefore income-tax deductible.

Rumely has been flooding lawyers, doctors and others with pleas to buy this literature, and a lot of them have fallen for the idea—thinking that it could be deducted from income taxes. Whether the Treasury lets them get away with it, however, may be another matter.

The amazing thing is that Rumely has so much influence, despite his earlier prison record. Educated in Germany, Rumely was active for the Kaiser in the first war, and has admitted under oath to acting as agent in spending $200,000 for advertising in foreign-language papers in the United States to propagandize foreign-born citizens for Germany. He has also admitted paying $3000 to the late Gaston B. Means (later jailed for the Lindbergh swindle) to spy on British shipping.

Rumely also admitted under oath paying $1000 of German money to distribute copies of the Irish-American in the United States, and $1500 to distribute "cotton circulars," the latter calculated to stir up the South because it could not ship cotton to Germany.

Finally the long arm of the law caught up with Rumely when he concealed the fact that the Kaiser had paid him $1,500,000 to buy the New York Mail and use it as a German propaganda sheet. He was sentenced to jail.

Despite this, Frank Gannett, the New York chain newspaper publisher, has consistently and heavily backed Rumely for years. So has Lamar Fleming, jr., of Texas, attorney for the Anderson-Clayton cotton firm; Ben Clayton, brother of Will Clayton, retired Undersecretary of State, together with Harvey Fruehauf, the auto trailer king; Mrs. Henry Doorly, owner of the Omaha World Herald, and various others. Senator Ed Moore of Oklahoma not only is a member of Rumely's committee, but vigorously champions his ideas on tidelands oil in the Senate.

One reason for the rapt devotion of this multimillionaire Committee for Constitutional Government for Dr. Rumely, of course, is that they all think alike. Apparently, therefore, the fact that he is a former German agent makes no difference. Also, they appear to condone their association by the fact that Rumely was pardoned.

Rumely was found guilty on December 8, 1920, and took his case to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals which affirmed his conviction. Later, October 23, 1923, the United States Supreme Court refused to review the case. Rumely had been sentenced to serve a year and a day.

Powereful forces then brought pressure on President Coolidge for a pardon. On January 24, 1924, Frank Munsey bought the New York Mail to combine with the Telegram, and on March 5, another publishing venture was set up under Rumely's direction with capital supplied by several leading Americans and a German industrialist.

Four years after his conviction, Rumely was still out on a stay of execution. But on March 13, 1924, things went wrong and Coolidge refused him a pardon.

Rumely then began serving time at the White Plains Penitentiary, New York. But on April 11, Coolidge commuted Rumely's sentence to one month and he was released, April 17, 1924. Almost one year later, January 19, 1925, Coolidge granted Rumely a pardon in such secrecy that members of the Senate Lobby Committee in 1938 didn't know about it.
